SEPTEMBER 1987

SPECIAL PRESS RELEASE

Gary Anderson, Executive Director of The AIDS Project, is the recipient of the American Lung Association's Roselle Huddleston Medal for 1987. For the past thirty years, this award has been presented annually to a Maine citizen who has made outstanding and distinguished contributions to improving the health of Maine citizens. Nominations for the Huddleston Medal are received from throughout the State, and winners are selected on the basis of volunteer services in the field of health, employment in a health related field with distinguished contributions above and beyond ordinary duties, or the establishment of an innovative program addressing health needs which can serve as a statewide model.

In announcing the award, American Lung Association of Maine President Clifford Goodall told Anderson, "You have met not one but all three criteria. You have earned respect as a leader and advocate on this (AIDS) important public health issue."

Anderson, who heads The AIDS Project, a Portland based service and education organization established to address issues concerning AIDS in Maine, will be presented with the Huddleston Medal at a luncheon held in his honor on September 15, 1987, at noon at Michel's Restaurant in Westbrook.

STATISTICS

CLASSIFIED

Applications are now being taken for a 30 hour per week position at The AIDS Project for an AIDS-Line Operator. Training provided by us. If interested, apply in writing with a cover letter and a resume to The AIDS Project - No phone calls please.
As you may know, I have recently been elected to serve as President of the Board of Directors of The AIDS Project. I feel honored to have been selected for this important role in our organization, and I am looking forward to working actively with TAP to meet the challenges which lie ahead. While I have yet to really get my feet wet, I would like to share with you some thoughts I have as I assume my new responsibilities.

First, I am very much impressed by the level of commitment and energy of everyone involved with TAP. Board members, volunteers, staff and interested members of the community have well demonstrated their willingness to "go an extra mile" on TAP's behalf, and I feel privileged to be working with a group of such dedicated and caring people. Your contributions of time and talent have given TAP a sound foundation; with your help, I feel confident TAP will continue to grow and mature in the future.

Second, I believe the primary mission of TAP is to respond meaningfully and effectively to the needs of the people we serve. In order to do this, it is imperative for us to listen carefully to the needs, suggestions and concerns of everyone who has an interest in our programs and services. I want to personally encourage everyone, particularly PWAs and people directly affected by AIDS, to feel free to contact me, or any other member of the Board, with any comments or concerns you may have regarding TAP's services, directions or activities. I think this sort of open communication is crucial to TAP's ability to provide responsive and relevant services for our community, and I welcome anyone who wishes to offer suggestions to give me a call at 772-6222, or write to me at Post Office Box 5266, Station A, Portland, Maine 04101. I will look forward to hearing from you!

Best Regards,
Robert Mitchell
Lee's Legacy

People are not inclined to part with money unless they feel that their needs are being fulfilled. You're given some idea of how many human needs Liberace fulfilled by the amount of money that changed hands — reported to have been as much as $400,000 per week in Las Vegas. Obviously, Liberace was more than a time­passer to his audience. He struck home, and he gave middle­America Mom what she could not get elsewhere. By his attire, he opened her the vision of androgyny — she who, in her "normal" life, is reduced to being the other pole in the polarity of the sexes. He was flamboyant; he was romantic, and he was unconventional. He represented the freedom that had been denied women when they were reduced to being a sexual toy for men. He defied the chains of propriety that had enslaved her for so long, and still do. And all of it with such fun that for an hour or two Mom could be a hedonist, and without shame.

In a culture that is just now beginning to emerge from the suffocation of Puritanism, Liberace defied its strictures. And, while most of us are scared of freedom (although we march for it and pray for it), during the span of his concert we sensed the joy that freedom could give — the freedom to wear what you wanted to wear and the freedom to act the way you felt like acting. For a short while, we were released from the horrible conventionality that consumes our energies, destroys our creativity and prevents our growth. We saw how much more interesting life could be if we'd let our hair down and enjoy freedom as a way of life.

While millions of heterosexuals were ignoring his homosexuality, Liberace assumed that no one guessed that he was homosexual. He even sued for libel and won the case while he was living a homosexual life. In 1959 he won a libel suit against a newspaper columnist in London who had dared to hint at his sexual orientation. But everybody knew. They didn't really care. They enjoyed his beautiful flamboyance and his genius. They made him so rich that he used to spend after­noons buying houses — just to have something to do with his money in his free time. And, now that Liberace is dead, his homosexuality is still not an issue. Millions of people of all sexual persuasions grieve the loss of one who meant much in their lives.

Now that the candles on his grand piano have been extinguished, Liberace is being criticized by the homosexual community for not coming out during his last days, as Rock Hudson did. True, it would have been to our advantage had he done so. All the heterosexuals who loved him would be kinder in their response to the problems of AIDS and more generous in backing funding in the fight against it.

But aren't we going too far? We who want freedom from conventionality, freedom to live our lifestyle, and freedom to be ourselves have no right to yank a brother from his closet or to condemn him when he doesn't emerge under his own steam. As difficult as it is to do, all homosexuals have the serious obligation to respect the dimensions of the closet another feels he must be in. Whether the brother/sister is alive or dead, closets are the space of another homosexual and should not be violated by brother/sister homosexuals.

This is not in defense of closets. Closets perpetuate the denial of the free exercise of our human rights. Closets make no one happy — neither the occupant nor the community. But respect for the individual and for that individual's choices is the only foundation upon which to construct and maintain a free world for all people. All the indignities to which we homosexuals are subjected are caused by lack of respect for us and our choices. Isn't it about time that we practice what we preach?

Liberace dealt with his homosexuality in the only way he could see for himself. Brought up in the Catholic Church with the evil of its own homophobia (with the sexual diversity in their staff they should know better), not one of us knows the psychological pain he might have suffered. Had he lived longer, his personal growth could have given him a new vision.

The homosexual community could learn a lesson from Liberace's life. Born one year after the end of World War I, when the sexual revolution was still a fetus, he grew up during a time when only a person of fierce independence could hold onto his own way. Liberace defied his father, who insisted that he continue as a soloist with symphony orchestras. How much wiser the son! There was only one Liberace to enthral millions with his personality, his outrageous finery and his musicianship, whereas the world is full of symphony soloists competing with one another for the few spotlights.

We should be grateful to Liberace. His style of performing helped maintain some small degree of respect for unconventionality among heterosexuals during the years when we had very little going for us. Before Stonewall, the life of the homosexual was invisible, almost to the point of extinction. Without Liberace, it might have been worse.
CALL FOR WRITINGS
By People Diagnosed With AIDS-Related Complex (ARC)

The People With AIDS Coalition, Inc. of New York City is producing a special publication titled "Living With ARC" to assist those who are actually living with AIDS-Related Complex. The PWA Coalition is a grassroots, community-based service and information organization based in NYC that is run by and for people with AIDS and ARC.

The PWA Coalition has already published a similar guide for people with AIDS (Surviving and Thriving with AIDS:Hints for the Newly Diagnosed) which has proved very useful and effective. Now we need your assistance to produce this newest publication for people with ARC and people who work with PWArc.

Imagine how useful it would have been if you had had something in writing to answer lots of those questions that came up in the weeks immediately following your ARC diagnosis. Won't you help us assist those newly diagnosed with ARC to live a better quality life, to realize there is reason to hope and a potentially rich life after diagnosis?

We need any and all types of writings (letters, articles, poetry, etc.) about your direct experiences about living with ARC. We'd prefer they be typed, but clearly handwritten manuscripts are just as welcome. Writings should be limited to no more than four pages. We have set the deadline for Monday, September 14, 1987, so that we can publish this much needed guide this fall.

CONSUMER ACTION AGAINST TWO CONDOM MANUFACTURERS

The Gay and Lesbian Press Association (GLPA) has endorsed a consumer action against two condom manufacturers--Carte-Wallace and Ansell Americas--to protest the condom industry's refusal to advertise in gay publications.

"While it would be irresponsible for us to call for an industry-wide boycott because of the AIDS crisis, we are asking gay men not to buy Trojan or Lifestyles condoms and send wrappers from these companies' competitors to their marketing departments," said Don L. Volk, GLPA president.

"It is unconscionable that Ansell President John Silverman said, "AIDS is a condom marketers' dream when gay men are dying in large numbers," said Volk.

"Gay and lesbian publications throughout the country have been at the vanguard in AIDS education," said Volk. "Without the efforts of the gay press, I believe there would have been considerably more AIDS deaths."

"For condom manufacturers to ignore the gay market by featuring women or non-gay couples in their advertising is a gross insult to our community. We call for this consumer action to show that we are not the 'captive' audience condom manufacturers might believe us to be," he said.

I HAVE TO FIND MY WAY
by Keaston Wright

I'm looking for a better day when discrimination goes away.
A place to lay my head,
where color doesn't matter;
What's in my heart instead.
I have to find my way.
There is a better day.

ON THE LIGHTER SIDE

"Your courage is remarkable, Richard, but we feel the governor's gay liaison should be a bit more sedate."

"I can't get over how they flaunt their sexuality."

In last month's newsletter, we made a plea for "sponsorship" on AZT funding. We repeat that plea this month, and ask you all to help us out:

Recently it has come to the attention of TAP that certain individuals in Maine who have AIDS or ARC are having some difficulty finding adequate financial assistance to provide them with AZT. The problem seems to be that these individuals either are eligible for Medicaid and haven't received their card yet, or they are covered by private or group insurance that will only pay 80% of the cost for AZT. Since AZT can cost over $800 per month, this can create quite a problem: the person who does not have Medicaid yet would need the full $800 per month to start on the drug; the person who has 80% coverage under their insurance still needs to come up with an additional $160 on their own.

The benefits of AZT are well known. Persons with AIDS or ARC find it very hard to accept the situation of needing AZT and not being able to afford it, especially knowing that it is the only proven treatment available. One person who has insurance through work said that he would rather keep his job and not go on AZT (since he couldn't afford the additional 20% knowing full well what this could mean to his health; for him the thought of losing his job, spending down to be eligible for Medicaid, etc., was not acceptable.

We know that the State of Maine is working hard to address this problem. It will take time for the State's response to be readied and then implemented. In the meantime, people in Maine need help. Therefore, TAP is hoping to set up a "Sponsorship" program for people needing financial assistance with AZT. This is only a temporary approach, but it is an important one. As the following letter makes clear, this problem can be solved. If you would like to help us "sponsor" people who need AZT and can't afford it, please send your earmarked funds to TAP. Every little bit will mean a lot.

NIGHT FALL

by Sa'd Nathaniel McCoy

As I sit alone in my room, patiently waiting for another day coming soon for a chance to awaken and be in my right mind, and feel the love of God is a special kind. Thanking God for another day, and to help me get through come what may I feel his presence always near, and as He casts out any fear, He guides me and protects me, always, anywhere, and I know He loves me and is always there. He is helping me through each new day, and gives me strength along the way. I trust in God to see me through each new day and everything I do as I sit all alone.
Dear Mr. Anderson:

Barbara Peabody has suggested that I inform you and other AIDS resource center directors about a book published by the University of Pittsburgh Press--The Deepening Shade: Psychological Aspects of Life-Threatening Illness, by Barbara Sourkes, Ph.D. "The Deepening Shade," says Peabody, "has so many treasures for those dealing with life-threatening illnesses... I think it might be very helpful to many of our families dealing with AIDS."

The Deepening Shade explores the impact on patients, families, and care-givers of living with a life-threatening illness. The book is addressed to mental health and health care professionals, as well as to those whose lives have been affected by the diagnosis of an illness like AIDS. I feel, as Ms. Peabody does, that it would be particularly valuable to the mental health division of your organization.

The Deepening Shade combines the discussion of separation and loss with the words of patients and families and care-givers. It leads the reader to feel, as well as to understand, the nature of the trauma of life-threatening illness. Unique and critical to this book for those involved with AIDS treatment is Dr. Sourkes's attention to the concept of "neutral time"--the state of limbo between living and dying, often a prolonged period, rendering the word "terminal" inapplicable much of the time. "My son Peter," Barbara Peabody wrote, "would have been delighted to see [Dr. Sourkes's] use of 'life-threatening' instead of 'fatal' or 'terminal!"

The Deepening Shade also tackles "anticipatory grief," the emotional response to the pain of separation prior to the actuality of loss, and "loss of control," over one's body, over disease and pain, over emotional boundaries, over life itself--important concepts for both those with AIDS and their care-givers to understand.

Sincerely,

Peter Oresick
Promotion & Marketing Manager
