No Place for Hatred

On July 13 over 500 people attended a rally at Portland City Hall sponsored by the Portland Police Dept. Bias Crime Task Force. (The Task Force is vice chaired by NLGPA President Karen Geraghty.) The purpose of the rally was for Portland to stand together as a community intolerant of the hate crimes committed against the city's diverse minority population. The Bias Crime Task Force asked for solidarity as they spoke out against these acts of violence in our neighborhoods.

The most recent reported incident of violence in the gay community occurred on July 1st outside of Blackstone's, a Portland gay bar. (see accompanying story on William Clark, the man who was attacked).

Speakers at the rally included representatives of the minority communities most affected by hate crimes: Karen Geraghty of NLGPA, Meyer Bodoff of the Jewish Federation, Moses Sebunya of the NAACP, and Noor Ayanle Osoble, a Somali immigrant. The Attorney General, Portland's Chief of Police, Portland's Superintendent of Schools and area clergy were also on hand to denounce the recent attacks in Portland.

William Clark is the gay man who was viciously attacked outside of Blackstone's on July 1. Karen Geraghty met William after the rally at City Hall and arranged to talk with him and discuss the attack and resulting legal issues on July 14.

William is very pleased with the response of the gay and non-gay community, as well as with his interactions with the Portland Police and the Attorney General's Office.

The attack has changed how he feels when he is out in public. He's "jumpy" now when out on the street. He thinks he has suffered some psychological damage as a result of the beating; but that in the long run he will be a stronger person for learning how to survive.

William is interested in turning his experience into activism. He would like to put a real face to the much debated statistics on hate crimes. He would also like to teach people to feel good about themselves - no matter how others treat them.

Young Men who have Sex with Men Develop Ways to Protect Selves, Peers

DHS' Office on AIDS - a group of young men (including a 23 yr old MGLPA board member) and other relevant professionals were together for intensive discussion and planning on July 16 - 19 at the Breckenridge Conference Center in York. Their task was to analyze causes for so many very young men in Maine being at risk of, and dying from, HIV/AIDS and possible preventive strategies.

Building an atmosphere of great trust, the young men shared their motivations and experiences, and that of their peers. This provided an important foundation for planning ways to "market" safer alternatives to young Maine men - particularly in rural areas where the risk is highest (50% of Maine's infection), and interventions which would increase the chance that the "target" population would respond to the marketing.

The content and outcomes of their discussion were striking and moving - - to numerous to detail here. The group's insights were quite profound, and it was not good news to the young men that they would have to "compromise" on so much of what they wanted changed: for example, that it would have to be mediated through the political process.

Under the joint sponsorship of two agencies of Maine: the Dept. of Education and the OHS' Office on AIDS - a group of young men (including a 23 yr old MGLPA board member) and other relevant professionals were together for intensive discussion and planning on July 16 - 19 at the Breckenridge Conference Center in York. Their task was to analyze causes for so many very young men in Maine being at risk of, and dying from, HIV/AIDS and possible preventive strategies.

There was no more striking insight from their discussions than how interrelated youth risks are with larger societal dynamics. When 25% of those surveyed have been forced out of their families' homes (often due to their coming out) some must resort to supporting themselves, to a large extent, through prostitution entailing high risk sex. When society and its representatives denigrate their sexual orientation, youth develop low self esteem, which may lead to suicide, or at the very least to self-destructive behaviors and risks (some engage in unprotected anal intercourse and drugs). For the target population there is often an inevitability about an early death from AIDS: "this is my destiny." Such feelings are antithetical to using the networks of helping programs. In order to do so, the youth must have good self-esteem, not fatalism.

The conference identified a number of arresting additional contributors to the low self-esteem of sexual minority youth: Regarding sex education in schools, "every other person in school gets to learn about their sexual functioning as if they count. Gay youth need the same but do not get it." A further aspect of this problem is that even if the gay sex education were furnished, many youth who are gay will already have dropped out due to oppression and low self-esteem.
The youths noted the relative scarcity of wholesome gay adult role models. They argued that passage of the Civil Rights Bill is crucial to making such gay mentors more visible and more readily accessible - - exchanging knowledge, sharing stories.

There is a scarcity of Outright groups - only two are currently functioning, and these only in the larger cities. There is a crying need for rural Outright groups, where the highest concentration of at-risk youth and behaviors are located.

The latter two paragraphs also illustrate interventions which could significantly enhance the self esteem of sexual minority youths, and therefore reduce the susceptibility to unsafe sex, which the Conference's youth labeled "a kind of suicide."

For the final two hours of the Conference a dozen adults in the field (including three from MLGPA) were invited from diverse organizations to receive and react to a summary of the youth's deliberations. Joni Foster and Steve Fleming, the conference coordinators, considered this gathering and format one of the most unique in the country. Concerted efforts will be made to try to turn the deliberations into actions by Maine governmental agencies, by non-governmental organizations, and by the youths, themselves.

Winnie Wier and Bruce Balboni

work really hard to provide us with news about what's happening in our community and that can't be an easy task. CPR only has about 200 subscribers, yet they print 5,000 copies of the paper to distribute! (We were shocked at this news!!) Advertising makes up the rest of the cost to put out 5,000 copies.

We think it's really important to have this forum in our community and we want to encourage you to subscribe. Please just take a moment to fill out the enclosed Subscription Form and send it in. Include a note to Winnie and Bruce and let them know what a valuable service they are providing to our community. I am sure they would like to hear some encouraging words. (And they also take constructive criticism very well, just for the record!)

1996 Elections Loom for Dirigo Alliance & Members

The work of the Dirigo Alliance (of which MLGPA is a founding member) hardly slackens during the long, hot summer.

The Board and its Executive and Targeting Committees are hard at work on three major issues:

I. Identifying the most promising candidates for the Maine House and Senate in '96. Numbers of Dirigo's friends in the Legislature will be "term-limited" out. It is Dirigo's task to identify candidates (including former legislators) who, if elected, would support the priorities of Dirigo's member organizations. To maintain the progressive mantle in the House and Senate, Dirigo not only seeks to keep the current proportion of progressive legislators, but to get an additional fifteen elected. A challenging goal, especially in these times.

II. Dirigo faces another major challenge: deciding whether to endorse a Congressional candidate in the upcoming primary for the 1996 race in the 1st Congressional District. Much depends upon the relevant policies of Dirigo's member organizations.

III. Dirigo continues to give top priority to getting big money out of politics. A major tool in this effort is the Maine Clean Elections Coalition (MCEC), which Dirigo (including MLGPA's Betsy Sweet) was instrumental in bringing into existence. The major objective of MCEC is to see that a referendum is put before Maine voters concerning campaign finance reform. (This issue is being considered at the federal level as well. Recently President Clinton and Speaker Gingrich tentatively agreed that a Federal commission should be established to study this question.) On Dirigo's part, the presumption is that getting big money out of politics will (a) result in legislators being less beholden to powerful, big-money interests, and (b) make it more possible to elect progressive legislators who, in turn, would be more sympathetic than "fat cats" candidates to Dirigo organizations' issues (such as the Civil Rights Bill). Betsy Sweet has agreed to represent MLGPA in the work of the MCEC.

Lest the summer be all work and no play for Dirigo, the Alliance has invited all its organizational members, and all the candidates it backed in the last election, to a "Swimmin' and Jumpin' Potluck Dinner" at Ellie Goldberg's hilltop, on August 12. Fun will be intermingled with discussion of (a) Issue I., above, and (b) a recap of the legislative session that just ended, and ideas about how to work together better in the next session of the present legislature.

MLGPA Annual Meeting and Board Elections

We will hold our annual meeting on Sat., Sept. 16th at the UU Church in Augusta. This meeting is particularly important because we will be electing officers and board members for the coming year.

If you are a member of MLGPA you can run for any seat on the Board. (You can challenge someone who holds an existing seat or run for a vacant seat.) We are very interested in new board members. You do not have to have any previous board experience, but you do have to be serious about leadership. We are particularly interested in people with a broad vision of the gay community who are willing to work pro-actively within the community to create change. It is a dynamic and exciting environment, and what you get from the experience is directly related to what you are willing to invest.

We have scheduled our August board meeting a little differently so that you can come and check us out! The August meeting is on Saturday, August 19th. We are having the meeting at one of our members homes in Hope. She has a pool and a trampoline so after the meeting we can have a swim party and potluck.

Please call 1-800-55-MLGPA (800-556-5472) and leave your name and address (speak slowly!) and we will send you a map and more details about the day.

5,000 Copies of MLGPA's Anti-Gay Violence Survey Sent Out

A copy of our anti-gay violence survey was distributed with CPR's current issue.

Please encourage your friends to fill them out and send them back to us. All information that identifies respondents will be kept completely confidential. The results of the survey will be used during the upcoming referendum campaign and during the next legislative session. It is very important that we get a high volume of responses.

Follow-up Survey of Legislators

We are in the process of following up with current legislators to determine the effect of last sessions lobbying strategies. In future newsletters we will update you on our findings.

Want a Job??
