Biographical Sketch

Roland Blais was born in Rumford, Maine in 1939, and knew by the time he was in high school that he was "different". He saved money and moved to Los Angeles in 1958, where he got a job with Broadway Department Store, and went to gay bars for the first time. He joined the Navy and served from 1959 to 1963, leaving with an honorable discharge. He then enlisted in the Army, serving 1963-1966, stationed at Walsrode, Germany, working with missiles. He returned to the United States, retrieving the car he bought in Germany from Newark Port, New Jersey, and drove to Hartford, Connecticut, planning to stay overnight with family before heading back home to Maine. While in Hartford he learned that Pratt & Whitney was hiring, so he stayed when he got a job there. He and his partner, Walter Deschamps, bought a home in Bolton, Conn. About 1974, they moved to Lewiston, Maine, to be near Roland's aging parents. When the Sportsman's Athletic Club (83 Lincoln St.) had financial difficulties, Roland and his partner took it over, turning it into a gay club. They moved it to 2-4 Bates St. in 1976; Blais sold the club in 2006, and it closed for good in October 2009. It had been the longest-open gay bar north of Boston.

Description of the Papers

The Roland Blais Papers contain press clippings, documents, buttons and other materials spanning from 1987 to 2009, with the majority created in the early-1990s.

The Papers have been divided into three series:

Lewiston Anti-Discrimination Ordinance
Newspaper and Magazine Clippings
Interests

Series 1. Lewiston Anti-Discrimination Ordinance

This series documents the media coverage of the effort to pass and retain an anti-discrimination ordinance in Lewiston, Maine. The Ordinance Pertaining to Discrimination Based on Sexual Orientation was developed by the Lewiston Police Department's Hate and Bias Crime Task Force. It was passed by the City Council in January 1993 but later repealed by a popular vote in November of the same year. Included here are the text of the ordinance, transcripts of testimony to the City Council in support of the ordinance, and a letter from Roland Blais to the Lewiston City Council. There is a press kit and draft of a campaign plan, and sign from Equal Protection Lewiston, an organization supporting the ordinance. Other materials related to the ordinance include "Vote No!" [to the repeal] buttons, anti-ordinance flyers and magazine articles.

Series 2. Newspaper and Magazine Clippings

This series consists of clippings and photocopies of newspaper and magazine articles, from the Lewiston Sun-Journal, the Maine Sunday Telegram, the Portland Press Herald and other publications. Some articles were photocopied and numbered by Roland Blais. The articles are from the late 1980s and early 1990s and cover the 1993 Lewiston Anti-Discrimination Ordinance, discrimination in the military and other LGBT issues.

Series 3. Interests

Part of the collection relates more personally to the life of Roland Blais and reflects his interests. There is a letter relating to the 1991 Act to Prevent Discrimination, L.D. 430. There are clippings related to the Sportsman's Athletic Club. His participation in AIDS activism is represented by buttons and materials related to the fundraiser Ride for Life!, an event sponsored by The Androscoggin United Bikers of Maine to support Positively Alive! and the AIDS Coalition of Lewiston-Auburn. Motorcyclists began the event at the Sportman's Athletic Club in Lewiston. This series includes newspaper clippings, flyers and pledge sheets for the First and Second Annual Ride for Life! events. There are also clippings showing his interests in motorcycles and cooking.

Series 4. Restricted

Some material from Equal Protection Lewiston containing contact information has been restricted to protect the privacy of individuals.
