A Unit of the University of Maine

Health/Recreation Task Force Formed

A task force has been established to assist in the ongoing planning, development, implementation and evaluation of our Employee Health and Recreation Program.

Beth I. Warren, executive director for Employee Relations, appointed the task force. George P. Connick, director of the Division of Basic Studies, will serve as chairperson.

In discussing the Health and Recreation Program and task force, Warren referred to studies which show that 75 percent of deaths in the U.S. today result from chronic illnesses. Many of those illnesses are stress-related and therefore preventable.

With society's increasing awareness of the importance of health promotion, industries have instituted health and recreation programs to reach adults where they spend most of their waking hours, namely the workplace.

USM is already "light years ahead" of industry in terms of human resources and physical facilities needed to deliver such programs, says Warren. We have people on campus with expertise in health promotion; we have health-related courses; we have gymnasiums and other facilities; and we now have the Employee Health and Recreation Task Force.

The 12-member task force, representing a cross section of faculty and staff, recently held its first organizational meeting.

Last year, the Executive Office of Employee Relations established a USM Employee Health and Recreation Program. James V. Sullivan, director of the program, has since instituted a lunch and learn series so that all faculty and staff can discuss stress management, nutrition and other subjects in an informal atmosphere. Placement of picnic tables around campuses, mapping of walking courses, even a shopping trip to Boston are among other Health and Recreation Program activities.

Formation of the task force, says Warren and Sullivan, will help increase the campus community's awareness of the Health and Recreation Program.

Summer Fellowships Awarded

Twelve faculty members have received 1983 Summer Faculty Fellowships, Acting Provost Helen L. Greenwood has announced. A committee received and reviewed 19 fellowship proposals.

Those receiving the fellowships are: Piers Beirne, associate professor of sociology, to continue work on two books now in progress: "Criminology: Comparative Perspectives" and "Piotr Stuchka: Selected writings on Marxism and the Law"; Thomas R. Carper, associate professor of English, to complete a book of poetry; Alice A. Lieberman, assistant professor of social welfare, to research "Factors Affecting the Health of Elderly Mentally Ill Women in Community Settings"; and Robert B. Loudon, assistant professor of philosophy, to prepare two articles for publication.

Michael Mazurkiewicz, associate professor of biology, to research "Synchronized Sporozoan-Cycles of Reproduction"; Raymond P. Neveu, professor of finance, to revise a textbook, "Managerial Finance"; Leonard J. Shedletsky, associate professor of communication, to continue research on "Coding: How We Represent Experience"; William H. Slavick, professor of English, to research the works of William Faulkner; William Sturmer, professor of management, to research on "Organizational Myths and Environmental Design"; and Walter R. Stump, professor of theatre, to continue work on the textbook, "Tracing the History of Theatrical Licensing and Censorship on the English Stage."

Awards in the School of Law go to: Orlando E. Delogu, professor of law, to research "Land Use Controls and the Public Purpose Concept"; and James M. Friedman, associate professor of law, to research the collective bargaining process.

Volleyball Showdown

Members of President Woodbury's Executive Staff and the deans will be asked to put their athletic abilities to the test Monday, March 28 in a volleyball games against top management personnel of Union Mutual.

The epic contest, sponsored by the Employee Health and Recreation Program, gets underway at 7:00 p.m. in the Portland Gym.

James V. Sullivan, director of the program and event organizer, invites all members of the campus community to attend.

Viola L. Smith, chief switchboard operator for 20 years, receives an award from President Woodbury at the annual Classified Staff Breakfast held recently in Gorham. See story page 4

Convocation: Diversity, Excitement

Convocation events continue through spring semester with faculty and other distinguished speakers bringing discussions, lectures, and conferences on "The Changing Roles of Women and Men" to USM.

On March 17, at 4:00 p.m., Dr. Ellen Weaver, assistant chair of the Department of Theology at Notre Dame University, will discuss "Women and Jansenism" in Room 410, Luther Bonney Hall, Portland.

Alice Lieberman, assistant professor, Social Welfare, will lecture on "New Roles for Dual Career Couples" on March 21 at 4:00 p.m. in Room 302, CRAS, Portland. The month will end with the Convocation Scholar Lecture for 1982-83, delivered by Nancy K. Gish, associate professor of English and co-chair of the convocation committee. The title of Gish's lecture is "Adam and Eve Revisited: Modern Poetry and the Myths of Sex". The time and place of the lecture have yet to be announced.

In April, Barbara Rosoff, director of Portland Stage Company, and Jerry Bamman, playwright, will discuss "Creativity and Changing Roles in the Theatre." That discussion will take place on Thursday, April 14, in 10 Bailey Hall, Gorham.

USM will host an all-day conference, titled "Religion and the Changing Roles of Women and Men." Saturday, April 23 Judy Burwell of Community Programs will moderate the first of the two discussions, "Religion as Agent of Socialization," at 10:30 a.m. The panel will consist of Elly Hainey, Melanie Kay, and C. Waite Maclin. The second panel will begin after lunch at 12:30 p.m. Anne Smith, Peter Bastien, Brooke Alexander, and Linda Bergstrom will discuss "Religious Responses to the Changing Roles of Women and Men." Rosalyn Baston will moderate.

Alyce O'Brien and Nancy Gish, co-chairs of the 1982-83 Convocation committee are enthusiastic about this year's successful convocation theme.

"It's been tremendous in terms of participation," said O'Brien; "I'm impressed with the diversity of programs we've been able to offer, the level of support given by faculty, staff, and administration, and by the community as well."

Gish concurred: "I've talked to a lot of students about this year's theme, and all have responded with a new awareness; one student told me she enjoyed the public events, but her real joy was being inspired to learn more on her own. That's exciting."

Further information on Convocation events can be obtained by contacting the University Relations Office at 780-4440.

Less Tolerance Toward a Tradition

Fifteenth century students at Padua did it. Nineteenth century students at Oxford did it, too. And twentieth century students carry on the long tradition of college drinking. Most of us can recall (sometimes with utter horror) drinking episodes from our own college days.

There is a less tolerant attitude among college administrators who no longer shake their heads and cluck, "Well, they're only kids having a good time."

A recent study conducted by David J. Hanson, professor of sociology at State University College of Arts and Sciences, Potsdam, N.Y. and Ruth C. Engs, associate professor of health and safety at Indiana University, shows that alcohol-related destructive behavior and vandalism have remained the same or decreased over the past eight years.

This being the case, why the explosion of interest in and concern with the college drinking problem?

Simply stated, it is a question of concern for the quality of campus life, and to some extent economics — the cost of repairing damage caused by drunken students and the cost of retaining habitually heavy drinkers in the campus community. There is a less tolerant attitude among college administrators today who no longer look beyond the property damage, shake their heads and cluck, "Well, they're only kids having a good time."

"If students get in trouble, they pay the price," says Hymoff, "the college is not going to be any different from the rest of the world."

According to Ira H. Hymoff, director of Counseling and Career Development, that is an accurate description of USM where administrative attention is focused on the 1100 residents rather than the commuting students who tend to participate in activities in their home communities.

Hymoff sees a return to the use of alcohol as the drug of choice among the students from a decade ago when other drugs were more fashionable. Freshmen and sophomore residents tend to be the heaviest drinkers — part of that "initial burst of independence" they experience as part of living away from home. "This is the group most interested in making new friends, in being involved on campus and taking part in social activities which involve drinking," explains Hymoff.

What concerns him is the "extensive experience" with alcohol that students have prior to arriving on campus as freshmen.

Northwest Artists on Display

The Pacific Northwest Drawing Invitational, an exhibit containing works by 33 artists from Washington, Idaho and Oregon, will be at our Art Gallery in Gorham through Thursday, March 31.

The purpose of the exhibition is to present an overview of contemporary drawing mannerisms in the Pacific Northwest," says Richard Twedt, director of galleries at Eastern Washington University, Cheney, Washington, and coordinator of the show.

The collection, designed to give regional Hymoff calls the eighties an age of pragmatism and self-centeredness, heavily influenced by advertising and the media, and without overriding social concerns. Today's college students, unlike their long-haired predecessors of the seventies, are interested in getting good jobs and making money, in establishing relationships and having a good time, Hymoff observes.

"What we're seeing is the result of an instant-gratification society where students say, 'If I don't feel good, I can get better by drinking,'" he says.

The good news is that this attitude diminishes as students mature. Hymoff cites a study done five or six years ago which showed that students increase their drinking behavior from high school through the second year of college. As they became more stable and sure of themselves, and as their interests broaden the importance of drinking decreases.

The policy at USM is to encourage responsible drinking and to take disciplinary action in the wake of disruptive, or inconsiderate drinking behavior. "If students get in trouble, they pay the price," says Hymoff, "the college is not going to be any different from the rest of the world."

"In any way our attention is drawn to them, we would try to get them some help, whether they want it or not."

As part of the less tolerant stance, kegs are no longer permitted in the dormitories and there are strictures regarding social activities held by campus organizations. Among them are: the drinking age is enforced; alternative beverages are available; food is served; the area is patrolled and cleaned up; and one member of the organization must sign a form assuming responsibility for the event. Groups that do not comply with the rules will not be allowed back on campus.

Hymoff's office, along with Student Activities and Residence Life, is working to ensure there are many alternative campus activities — films, concerts, etc. — "so that students do not turn to drinking out of boredom or feel that it is the only activity available to them," he says.

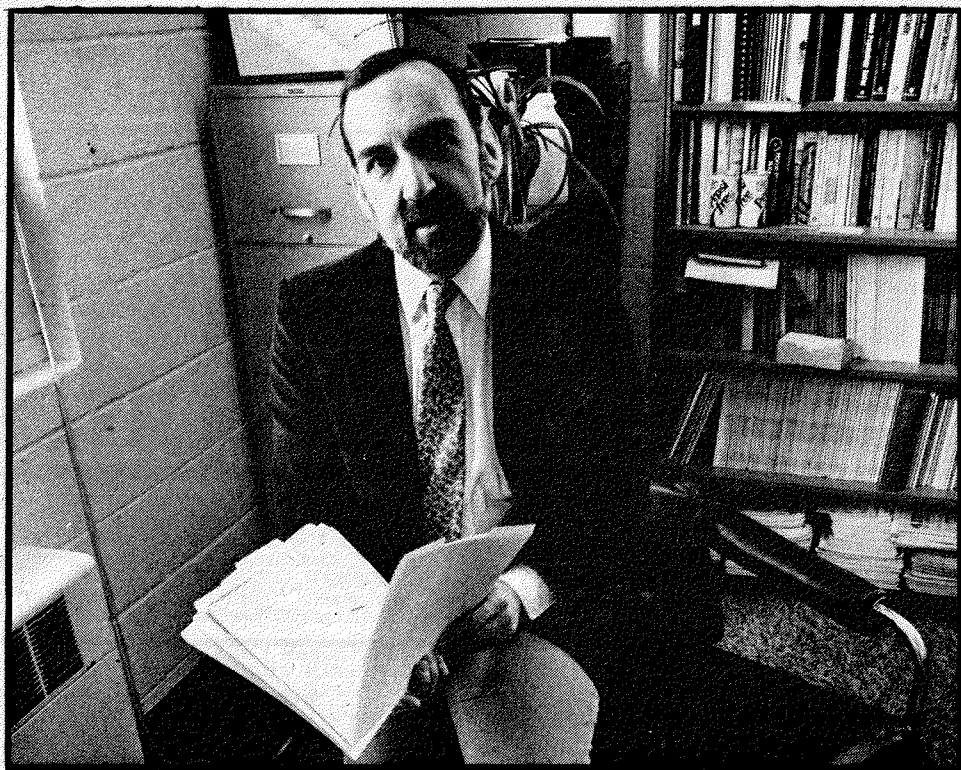

Another finding of the Hanson-Eng survey was that heavy drinking among college students increased slightly from 11.6 percent in 1974 to 17.2 percent in 1982. The survey defined heavy drinking as "six or more drinks at a sitting at least once a week."

Hymoff has developed an extensive program for identifying and treating heavy drinkers. Staff members of campus units including Police, Housing, Residence Life, Student Activities, Food and Health Services are trained by Hymoff to spot artists a national showcase, features works in ink, pencil, pastels and other media including painting. "Many of these artists show locally or only in the Pacific Northwest," says Twedt, "and they should have greater exposure."

USM is one stop on a tour that includes Kent State University, Lawrence University of Wisconsin, and universities in Connecticut and Tennessee.

Gallery hours are 12:00 to 4:00 p.m. Sunday through Thursday. For more information, contact the Art Gallery, 780-5409, or the Art Department, at 780-5460.

Dr. Ira H. Hymoff, director of counseling and Career Development.

students with alcohol problems and make referrals. Such students usually exhibit disruptive behavior, get in trouble with the police and/or are sick frequently or accident-prone.

When these students come to Hymoff (sometimes as a result of the action of the disciplinary committee) the modern approach to alcohol treatment is implemented. That is, the student is forced to get help. "In any way our attention is drawn to them, we would then try to get them some help, whether they want it or not," Hymoff says, admitting that "sometimes all we get is compliance." Nevertheless, he tries to establish rapport with problem drinkers in order to help them develop an approach to deal with the problem. He also makes referrals to outside agencies, particularly Day One, which can help them find realistic solutions. In rare cases some students have been hospitalized, and others have been forced to leave the dormitories because of their recalcitrance.

There are formal support groups and even an informal approach to helping these problem drinkers in which students who are recovering alcoholics work one-on-one with drinkers. "We do not do this extensively," says Hymoff, "but when we have done it, it has worked well."

Counseling and Career Development is making concerted efforts to deal with this centuries-old tradition of campus drinking. Hymoff and his staff will speak to any student or faculty group — to get the word out about responsible drinking behavior.

We tell them, says Hymoff, "If you're a member of the university community, you must act like a responsible adult. If you don't, then your membership in that community may be at stake."

"We want to focus all the health and recreational resources available at USM so that our employees are also aware of them and feel free to participate," says Warren. "The task force can help the Health and Recreation Program focus on the physical and emotional well-being of our employees through the Employee Consultation and Outreach Service, fitness programs, physical and social recreation programs, workplace safety and others. The task force can also work through the University Effectiveness Program (UEP) to help with organizational and staff development planning."

We recognize our human resources as our most important and also recognize that the quality of our academic programs is largely dependent on the quality performance of faculty and staff," says Warren.

"USM is really concerned about employees," says Sullivan. "Through this task force we want to get the word out that employees are welcome to do anything and everything we do, either formally through established programs or informally through participation in small group and individual activities."

Members of the campus community who have suggestions for the Health and Recreation Program are invited to pass them on to the task force. Everyone will also receive a needs assessment survey by the end of March to assist with program planning.

Members are: Arthur O. Berry, professor and chair of Industrial Education and Technology; William B. Bullock, business manager, Business Office; Robert S. Caswell, acting director, Public Information; George P. Connick, task force chair, director, Division of Basic Studies; Margaret A. Fournier, associate professor, School of Nursing; and Lynn E. Fremd, assistant director, Student Financial Aid.

Other members are: Marilyn A. MacDowell, serials assistant, Library; Jane McCrodden, research assistant, Biomedical Research Institute; Arlene M. Michael, administrative secretary, Foreign Languages and Classics; Joseph P. Papa, director, Facilities Management; Paul C. Rogers, professor, Mathematics; and Helen Y. Smith, administrative assistant, Educational Services.

Campus Notes

All students (except those in Industrial Education) who will be student teaching during fall semester, 1983, are required to attend an orientation meeting at 3:00 p.m. Wednesday, March 23. The meeting will be held in Room 10 Bailey Hall on the Gorham campus. Policies will be distributed at that time.

For further information contact Melissa Costello, director of Clinical Experiences at 5302.

More About Computers

Passing the Word

For the many people on campus who want to know more about word processing — what it is and what programs and equipment are available — Ellen Trask, administrative associate in Public Service, gives us her review of a book she found to be particularly helpful.

"The Word Processing Book" by Peter A. McWilliams will be a pleasant reading experience. Using a breezy, humor-filled writing style, McWilliams eases the novice (as well as the pro) through technical information on computers and programs, what they cost and what they can do. McWilliams wrote the book on a microcomputer, when transmitted it over telephone wires to a phototypesetting machine at a printing company in his area."

The paperback can be ordered either from a local bookstore or from Ballantine Books, c/o Random House Mail Service, 400 Hahn Road, Westminster, Maryland, 21157. The cost is $9.95 and $1.00 handling charge.

Computer Hours Corrected

The Computer Center hours listed in Currents, February 14, 1983, are incorrect. Please note the corrected times as provided by Steven Rand, CAPS director.

Portland: Monday through Thursday: 8 a.m. to 11 p.m.; Friday 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Saturday: 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Sunday 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Gorham: Monday through Thursday 8 a.m. to 10 p.m.; Friday: 8 a.m. to 10 p.m.; Saturday: 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.; Sunday 12 noon to 10 p.m. Gorham will remain open until midnight if users are present at 10 p.m.

What We're Doing

DAVID DREW, III, instructor in physical education, and PATRICIA R. FIELD, instructor in physical education, recently have been awarded Certificates of Appreciation from the American Red Cross for outstanding volunteer service in first aid and CPR.

ROSE MARASCO, adjunct professor of art, will be exhibiting her photographs at Alexander Hall Gallery, Westbrook College, Portland, March 23 through April 14. Opening reception will be on March 23 from 5-8 p.m. Regular gallery hours are Sunday through Thursday, 1-4 p.m.

MICHAEL MAZURKIEWICZ, Jr., associate professor of biology, has coauthored a research paper entitled "Spurwinkia: Morphology, Systematics and Ecology of a New Genus of North American Marshland Hydrobiidae (Mollusca: Gastropoda)" which appears in the Proceedings of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia, Vol. 134, pp. 143-177. The research was supported in part by a Summer Faculty Fellowship. The name for the new molluscan (snail) genus is derived from the Spurwink River Estuary which borders Cape Elizabeth and Scarborough, Maine.

GONZALO PLASENCIA, assistant professor of Spanish, recently chaired a session on the Latin American novel entitled "Vision nihilistica del ser hispanoamericano." The session, which was part of the Twentieth Century Literature Conference held at the University of Louisville, focused on the Argentine author Ernesto Sabato and on the Ecuadorian writer Jorge Enrique Adoum.

A Reminder

Members of the campus community are reminded that official USM stationary shall not be used for personal, political or any other uses unrelated to regular university functions and business.

Also, the campus mail system and USM postage should be used only for official University business and not for personal or other non-University uses.

We should also note that University telephone infowatch numbers are to be used only for University-related calls, not for calls of a personal, non-business nature.

LEONARD J. SHEDLETSKY, associate professor of communication, refereed the competitive papers in language behavior for the annual convention of the Western Speech Communication Association. In addition, he was chair of the session titled, "Blood, Violence and Syntax," and a participant in two workshops, one on "Teaching Listening," and the other on "Male-Female Communication," in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

RICHARD STEINMAN, professor of social welfare, has reviewed Raymond Berger's "Gay and Gray" in the upcoming issue of the "Journal of the American Geriatric Society." He recently served as guest lecturer to social welfare students at East Texas State University, Commerce, Texas.

Nurses Take To The Road

USM nursing students will soon be visiting more than 35 Maine high schools to present a slide/tape program on career and education options in the nursing field.

This is the second year that senior nursing students, under the guidance of faculty advisor Leslie H. Nicoll, have organized this program to share their enthusiasm for nursing with high school students and career counselors.

The slide/tape program, "Options in Professional Nursing Education and Career Opportunities," is part of the senior course, "Leadership in Nursing."

Professional nursing today offers a varied program of study and subsequent career opportunities. Two-year associate degree programs, three-year diploma programs four to five-year baccalaureate programs and master's programs exist in the U.S. Career opportunities are available in hospitals, community nursing, schools, industry, the military and other sectors.

The students will present the program at 37 high schools from Kittery to Old Town now through April 14.

Participating students are Joanne Collette of Biddeford, Ruth Craig, Ann Marie DeSarno and Deborah Marshall, all of Portland, Rebecca Sylvester of Yarmouth, Sharon Tibbetts of Newport, Linda Wren of Belfast, Moras Robinson of Bangor and Nancy Trenble

Improved Access

As noted in the last issue of Currents, respondents to Jean Gutmann's computer use survey cited difficult access to equipment as one of the major roadblocks to greater faculty use of the hardware and facilities.

In order to remedy this situation, USM and CAPS (Computer Center) have added more terminals and microcomputers, and are currently taking steps to provide around-the-clock access.

On the Portland campus, there are now five CAPS direct-line terminals at the Computer Center, second floor of the Science Building; 10 direct-line terminals in the workroom at the back of the reference section of the library; and two direct-line terminals in 208 Science.

On the Gorham campus in Bailey Hall, there are three direct-line terminals in the hallway at the Computer Center in the basement; six new Apple II's with a printer across from Director Steven Rand's office at CAPS in the basement (operating manuals are available in the CAPS office). The PDP's computer operated by the math department has five user terminals. Call math professor Richard O. Kratzer at 5363 for access information. In the Towers dormitory there are three direct-line terminals in a workroom off the main lounge and in Robie Andrews two in a basement lounge. There are three Apple II microcomputers with disk drive and one printer in a workroom on the second floor in the library. Ask at the circulation desk for operating manuals and keys.

Acting Provost Helen L. Greenwood appointed Gutmann Computer liaison to evaluate extent of computer usage on campus; to summarize problems associated with computer use; and to develop suggestions for further direction with regard to computer competency.

Faculty Funds

Title III funds have been earmarked to help support faculty who want to participate in the conference "Computers in Higher Education." The first-of-its-kind, statewide conference, jointly sponsored by USM and UMA, will be held Saturday, March 19 on our Portland campus.

John W. Bay, Title III Coordinator and associate professor of economics, says that "$2,500 has been allocated to full and part-time faculty from the various academic units on a first come, first served basis" for those who registered by March 11. The $20 registration fee on the day of the conference will not be paid from these funds, he adds.

Last fall, we received a $327,518 from the U.S. Department of Education for the first year of a seven-year grant under the Title III Institutional Aids Program. Funding for each of the remaining six years will be considered annually. Grant activities include establishment of a centralized management information system, a faculty development program and others.

The March 19 workshop will focus on the increasing value and use of computer technology in educational institutions. Dr. John H. Strange, in internationally-known authority on the use of computers in education, and vice-president of the Council for the Advancement of Experiential Learning, will be keynote speaker.

Various concurrent workshops will be held throughout the day on computers in instruction, computers in administration, computers in research, computer literacy and related topics.

George P. Connick, director of USM's Division of Basic Studies and Jill Rubinson, director of Special Services at UMA, are conference coordinators.

Gloria S. Duclos, professor of classics and first occupant of the Walter E. Russell Endowed Chair, congratulates H. Draper Hunt, III, professor of history and present occupant, following his presentation of the 1983 Walter E. Russell Endowed Chair in Philosophy and Education Lecture. Hunt delivered the lecture in Russell Hall, Gorham Wednesday evening, March 2. A reception followed.

Wroth Drafts Rules of Evidence for Vermont

Vermont state courts will soon be operating under new rules of evidence drafted by L. Kinvin Wroth, dean of the University of Maine School of Law.

"The rules have the enthusiastic support of all trial bar and bench and should improve the quality of evidence practice in the trial courts," said Vermont Chief Justice Albert W. Barney. The Vermont Supreme Court recently decreed the new Vermont Rules of Evidence to be effective in all state courts beginning April 1, 1983.

Wroth originally drafted the rules in 1977 with assistance from an advisory committee of Vermont lawyers and judges. The state Supreme Court did not adopt the rules at that time.

The School of Law dean and attorney John Dooley of South Burlington, Vt.

Distinguished Speakers

Six of our faculty have been selected to participate in a new University of Maine Distinguished Speaker Series.

Selected were John W. Bay, coordinator of Title III and associate professor of economics; Jeremiah P. Conway, associate professor of philosophy; William F. Gayton, associate professor of psychology; Madeleine D. Giguere, professor of sociology; Bill Street, jazz studies, Department of Music; and Allan R. Whitmore, associate professor of history.

Roger Ekins, dean of Student and Community Services at UMA, says each campus was asked to select faculty members whose "expertise, speaking ability and relevance of topic" could be expected to attract University as well as community audiences. Ekins' office is coordinating the series.

Judith R. Koenig, coordinator of Student Activities and New Student Programs, chaired USM's selection committee.

The Distinguished Speaker Series was designed, "to recognize and reward excellence among our people and to provide extracurricular education at a low cost," says Ekins. A brochure listing all speakers should be available from Ekins' office in the near future.

The Chancellor's Office, reports Ekins, will provide support to ensure that each campus can invite at least one speaker-to visit.

Poet Heaney to Read

The Writers Union will sponsor a reading by internationally-honored Irish poet, Seamus Heaney.

He will read selections from his own work at 5:00 p.m., Monday, March 14 in the Moot Court Room of School of Law, Portland campus.

Heaney, who now teaches one semester a year at Harvard, is winner of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences E.M. Forster Award, the Cholmondeley Award, the American Irish Foundation Award, and the Hudson Review's 1982 Bennett Award.

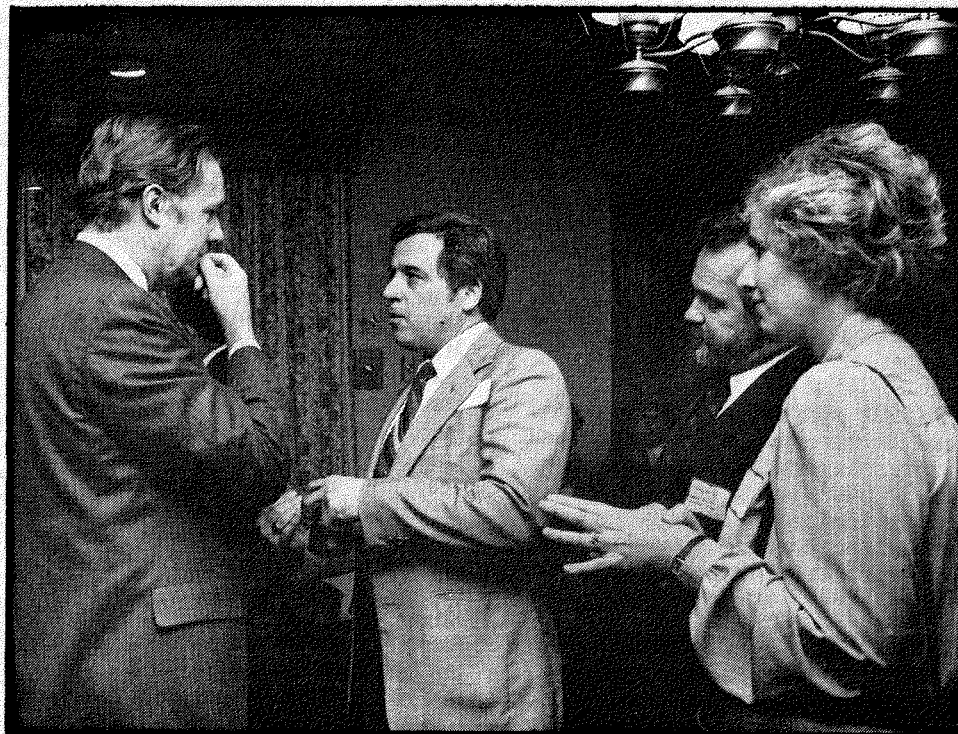

Positions

RESIDENT DIRECTOR/COUNSELOR, live in position, appointment date August 15, 1983, apply by April 15 to James McCoy, Chairperson, Resident Director/Counselor Search Committee, 100 Upton Hall, USM, Gorham.

revised and updated the 1977 draft with assistance from the Court's Advisory Committees on Rules of Civil and Criminal Procedure. The revision, including a complete review and updating of accompanying, explanatory notes, was undertaken in January of 1982 at the request of the Court. The Vermont bar and trial bench urged the Court to authorize the revision.

Rules of evidence delineate what pieces of evidence can and cannot be submitted to a jury for consideration.

Wroth has served as reporter and advisor to the Vermont Supreme Court's Advisory Committee on Rules of Procedure since 1969. He drafted the Vermont Rules of Civil and Appellate Procedure, effective 1971, the Vermont Rules of Criminal Procedure, effective 1974, as well as numerous amendments and accompanying explanatory notes to those rules.

President Woodbury travelled to Alfred last Monday, March 10 for a late afternoon meeting with 50 area citizens. It was the latest in a series of meetings in York County scheduled to inform citizens of USM programs and discuss mutual concerns.

Poet Robert Lowell called Heaney "the best Irish poet since Yeats." Heaney's books include: "North," "Wintering Out," "Door into the Dark," "Death of a Naturalist," "Field Work" and a collection, "Selected Poems, 1965-1975."

Born on a farm in Londonderry, Northern Ireland in 1939, Heaney now lives on the outskirts of Dublin.

"I teach English literature, I publish in London, but the English tradition is not ultimately home," he says.

The poetry reading is free and open to the campus community. For further information call 780-4326.

150 Years of Service

Members of the classified staff were honored last month at the annual breakfast for their contributions to USM, a university that President Woodbury termed, "dynamic and evolving in contrast to a more static story from so many campuses across the country."

Special awards were presented to 19 employees, who together have given more than 150 years of service to USM.

President Woodbury presented a 20-year award to Viola L. Smith, chief switchboard operator in Portland.

Theresa V. Fickett, copyroom operator in Portland, received a 15-year award.

Those who received a 10-year awards are: Albert J. Charlton, custodian, Facilities Management, Gorham; Katharine M. Fogg, custodian, Facilities Management, Gorham; Gordon T. Harvey, security clerk registrar, Gorham; Donald E. Hensley, custodian, Facilities Management, Portland; Florence P. McHugh, administrative secretary, law school library, Portland; Arlene M. Michael, administrative secretary, Foreign Languages and Classics, Portland; and Ernest H. Waterhouse, custodial service supervisor, Facilities

Management, Gorham.

Those who received five-year awards are: Barbara Bullens, secretary, Professional Education, Gorham; Joseph R. Charrier, head custodian, Facilities Management, Portland; Judith A. Drouin, senior records technician, registrar's office, Gorham; Larry J. Homan, landscaper/groundskeeper, Facilities Management, Gorham; Jill M. Kendall, secretary, Sociology Department, Portland; Dale E. Kuczinski, library assistant, library, Portland; Theresa B. Mathews, records technician, registrar's office, Gorham; Richard B. McKeen, police officer, security, Gorham; Robert B. Peckham, custodian, Facilities Management, Portland; and Floyd L. Reynolds, assistant supervisor, Mail Services, Portland.

The breakfast also featured a history of USM delivered by H. Draper Hunt, III, professor of history and second occupant of the Walter E. Russell Endowed Chair.

Ronda M. Bridges, president of the Classified Staff Senate, was introduced along with the president's Executive Staff and everyone's favorite busdriver, Smokey.
