Director's Note: The nightmare evoked in "Canaries" is a wake-up call to all of us—to beware of supporting the repression of "others" without investigating the circumstances under which "they" are accused of "subversion." As the Argentine "Dirty War" demonstrates, efforts to root out ways of thinking target not only so-called subversives and their collaborators, but also any who do not enthusiastically support the regime as well as innocent bystanders and functionaries that have outlived their usefulness. This play is a call for tolerance, for coalition building, and for breaking silence about repression on our lives.

In striking contrast to the distrust and fragmentation rampant in the world of the play, I have found it a pleasure to work with my first team of USM student and faculty collaborators, who remained creative and genial in the face of infinitely expanding responsibilities.

Design Team and Crew Biographies

Jennifer Boislard is giving her last performance as a theater student. Many thanks to all who have made the last four years the most incredible in my life; you know who you are. This performance is dedicated to my mother, father, and brother. Peace. Patience Goodwin, a freshman theater major, has learned an important lesson from this show. Life isn’t always a fairy tale.

Brian D. Cote's most recent theatrical accomplishments include set design for SPA’s One-Acts, and Teiresias in Oh! Antigone. He is excited to portray such an unctuous character, yet is disgusted by the role some people play in reality, a lesson to us all — lest we forget.

David Moisan is a theater major at USM. He would like to dedicate his performance to the best brother a man could ever ask for.

Chris Sias found that Dream of Canaries has not only been a challenging experience but an educational one as well. Every day I learned something new, whether it was about acting or the world. I hope everyone enjoys this show. Don't be a canary...

Jayson P. Jolin is a junior who is interested in a career as an actor. He wishes to thank his family for their support.

Amy LaRosa has been in many shows at USM, both as a performer and as a sound designer. Much gratitude and admiration for all those who fight the battle against oppression.

Stephanie Hughes recently transferred to USM's Theatre department from Boston. She was last seen in the main-stage production of Pippin. "I enjoyed working with such a wonderful group of people". This is Ryan Corliss' third year in the Theatre department and his fifth performance. His last project was his directing debut of Purgatory last semester.

Sam Goldstein was last seen on stage in the Student Performing Artist's One-Act show. He thanks his mom and Alice for their support.

Keith Rowe would like to dedicate this performance to one of his best friends, Jessica, who just moved to Seattle. "She got lucky enough to go through my trials and tribulations with me here in Maine. The hardest to learn was the least complicated".

Tessa Hartley has had a great time working with the cast and crew on Canaries. She hopes the show opens the audiences' eyes as much as it has her own. Danielle Estes - "From a product of incest in Oh! Antigone to a body part in Pippin to a dead person in Canaries. What is next? Wendy E. Getchell - "Truth and Happiness here and ever after."

This is Alice Starr McFarland's second time choreographing at USM and she wants to thank all the lovely dancers who made it happen. Happy Birthday Mom! Patrick Davis is making his second acting appearance. Thespian assailants are forcing him to perform with no preparation. If he fills in for the role in a satisfactory manner, he may be permitted to live out his natural life.

Rene Renner is a graduating senior whose design credits include Miss Julie, Loot, Shirley Valentine, and the 1995 Dance Festival. She was Asst. TD for Oh, Antigone and Pippin as well as stage manager at USM and Production Manager at The Theater Project in Brunswick. Guy Durichek is a junior theater major who recently directed Tell for the SPA one-acts "Three Shot Minimum." He is grateful to Assunta for allowing him to add creativity to this process, and for opening his eyes to the atrocities hidden by all governments.
