WE EXIST

EVIDENCE OF MAINE'S BLACK FAMILIES from 1800 to the 20th Century

Mr. Edgar Anderson

“Well, being the second of six children and the only boy in the family, it was sort of different for me. Not having any brothers set up sort of how I was raised. My parents were divorced when I was ten, so I grew up in a house with six women: my mom and my five sisters. So, I learned to do everything that women traditionally do. I can cook, clean, sew, bake. I grew up doing all that. Clean house and doing all of those things.”

Mr. Edgar Anderson (Male; age 51; born 1950 in Chicago suburb called Harvey)

Reverend Albert and Clemmie Jackson

“Neville Knowles who, ah – ah I met him. Ah, I was a teenager at the time and we lived next door. And, ah, him and his family was hardworking.”

Reverend Albert Jackson (born in Slabfork, Virginia; age 61; lived in Maine for 43 years) and Mrs. Clemmie Jackson (born March 1948 in Marengo County, Alabama; age 55; lived in Maine for 3.5 years)

WE EXIST

Mr. James Mathews

"My father's name was Oscar Mathews, Jr., and he worked for the railroad. Not like a chef, but he was a cook on the railroad, and he traveled between Boston, Massachusetts, and Portland for a number of years. And my mother, her name was Llewena Hill Mathews, and she was one of the first graduates of Gorham Normal School which is now the University of Southern Maine. And she was an accomplished pianist, and she also was attempting to become a school teacher, but at the time Black school teachers were not hired."

Mr. James Mathews (age 59; born 1941 in Portland Maine; married with five children; lived in Maine all his life – lived in South Portland for over 26 years)

Mr. Rupert Richardson

"I think it was great. I know, I lived here. As I pointed out, you know, I was born and raised here in the city. And the section of the city that we lived in all the people got along famously. We were one large, happy family, in the west end. And to this day, those that are still living: you know, we're still one happy family."

Mr. Rupert Richardson (born in Portland, Maine; living in Maine for 71 years)

Mr. Richard Tarrence

“Good question. It certainly is different than growing up in the inner city. When I came to Maine I had a pretty difficult adjustment period. Just some of those cultural things that I’m used to are not here. It’s often difficult to get a haircut. You know, exposure that you would have normally in the inner city or growing up somewhere with your own population, it’s just a lot of little things missing—connections are missing. And, you know, raising my children is interesting in that as they grew older and as they noticed the very differences, they were starting to mix in very well. They were making friends, and, you know, they were involved in sporting activities and community.”

Mr. Richard Tarrence (age 57; born 1945 in Cleveland, Ohio; moved to Maine in October 1975)
