In our presentation tonight, we are pleased to bring to you a collection of writings, short stories, and essays all of which are native to this country. In fact, many are the original works of New Englanders who lived during the periods depicted. In dramatic form the works are brought back to life again with the uses of narrative, music, and mixed media. They reveal the pride, anguish, envy and determination of a people who molded the American character and helped to develop a rich folklore.

BEATRICE: "This long street with all the doors shut and everything crowded next to each other...And then I start getting afraid the vegetables are going to spoil...and that nobody's going to buy anything."

TILLIE: "In front of my eyes one part of the world was becoming another.
Atoms exploding, flinging off hairy bullets that caused the fountain, atom after atom breaking down into something new."

RUTH: "...it says that I exaggerate and tell stories and that I'm afraid of death and have nightmares..."

THE IRENE RYAN FOUNDATION SCHOLARSHIPS

In 1972 a new dimension was added to each of the thirteen Regional Festivals with the establishment of a scholarship program through the Irene Ryan Foundation. Miss Ryan, one of America's most successful stars in the entertainment world, established fifteen annual scholarships to be given each year through the Foundation.

A seven hundred and fifty dollar scholarship is awarded to the most promising student actor at each Regional Festival. The winners are brought to Washington, expenses paid, to participate in a special evening program of audition scenes. From this audition, two more scholarships of two thousand dollars each will be awarded. Scholarship winners may choose their own course of study. Scholarship money will be paid directly to the institution of the winner's choice.

Before her death in the spring of 1973, Miss Ryan explained that she established the Irene Ryan Foundation as an expression of gratitude. "The entertainment industry has been very good to me. I earned a fine salary for nine years on 'The Beverly Hillbillies'. I feel that encouraging young people in their endeavors is a good way to give something back to that industry."

* Performed at National Festival in Washington, D.C.
And this production is only the beginning.

From campuses throughout the nation, theatre departments are participating in one of 13 regional American College Theatre Festivals. From these, up to 10 productions will appear in the national ACTF in the John F. Kennedy Center.

As the corporate sponsor of ACTF, we're pleased to assist the thousands of people who make the Festival one of the most exciting and innovative theatre programs in the country.

ACTF is people and so is Amoco Oil Company. Through the Festival, hundreds of Amoco men and women have become partners in the future of talented young students and theatre in America.

We invite you to join us in that future. It's simple, really. Just sit back, relax, and enjoy the
