The Treehouse Players introduce a new director to this campus in the production of ETHAN FROME. William Steele, in the past five years has been associated with the Art Theatre of the Portland Campus. During this time he has directed a variety of types and styles of plays, ranging from the classical MANDRAGOLA, to the contemporary plays of Thorton Wilder. Mr. Steele is a faculty member of the newly merged UMPG and should not be considered as a guest director but rather as a permanent member of our present theatre program. With the two campuses merging, faculty and student talents have begun to combine and have greater interchange with Portland and Gorham.

Mr. Steele chose ETHAN FROME for his debut on the Gorham campus due to its indigenous relationship to the area. Though it was adapted from a book published in 1912, the theme is still relevant, for human nature adujsts slowly even in the age of technology. The strengths and weaknesses of the characters are inherent in all men, and any examination of these qualities are relevant.

We welcome Mr. Steele and look forward to a happy and merging relationship between ourselves and the Art Theatre of Portland.
