13-14 March 1946

Dear Ones,

I'll start this tonight and finish it probably tomorrow evening. I have just taken my second shower and am about to go to sleep. I went to the club after supper, read the NY Times, and some magazines. This current Russian situation is quite the thing; I cannot help but feel that behind the immediate questions of armistice agreements, troop dispositions in Greece, the current crisis is directly traceable to Russia's unilateral reaction to hostility in the west. I think that Connolly came close to the heart of the thing when he called for a big 3 meeting and an honest "heart" shoring up of the whole thing. Russia's theory is not hard to approximate: Britain has a relatively free hand in India, in Egypt, and Western Africa, in the area south of the Red Sea, in Greece. Russia must either have unquestionable assurances of good faith or have balance. The same is true of every major power in the world - Russia and Britain have fallen quite understandably into the position of opposing each other in Europe, unless the U.S. acting for itself and acting as world leader can put the hand of the world at the other alternative, or face a very deadly world picture. Where are we without good faith?

Anyway, to get back to camp. I was sitting in the club and was paged for a phone call. Salute.
fell out of my chair and naturally I could think of only one thing - Boston. But as it was boisterous - Stella Brown had got my letters and had located me! You can't top Southern hospitality! She was warm in her welcome, we talked a while, reminiscing my last visit and then we got around to the weekend and tentatively put it to fit me up and the two of a place to stay!! I am to call her again Friday. I may have myself in a spot - tied until two tentative dates - with thing straight. I just hope that I end up with at least one! But back to all. Mrs. Brown was very concerned over you, Arthur, and asked me to be sure and send you her greeting and her hope for your speedy and complete recovery. 05 for tonight. I'll get back to this tomorrow.

7:20 a.m.

You might enjoy the summary of my day. my understanding during my day: pajamas off, 06:00 breakfast, 06:00 athletic uniform on, morning program, athletic uniform off, shave, 08:00 lunch, 08:30 athletic uniform on, afternoon program, athletic uniform off, shave, 09:00 dinner, and finally pajamas on. (00 time stands for 00 hours)

1:20 p.m.

We got an extra hour at lunch so I'll still have an all day nap.

Sumner,
