Dear Sumner:

Good afternoon!

Mother is mailing you the references as fast as she receives them. By this time you ought to have at least two. Also by this time you should have your birth certificate.

I have not had the time to write you about the campaign, which is the most important thing of the moment, and I have not had an opportunity to talk to Mother to learn whether she had written you; but I suppose within a day or two either one of us will send you the full details of what looks to be the most ambitious campaign ever held in this city and by the same token the most successful.

Grandma will probably be coming home in time for Passover and Mother, Helen and I will seder with her and grandpa. In that way we will bring them a good measure of cheer and holiday spirit.

There is little that I can think of at the moment that should supplement the details Mother provides you with, but tomorrow night while at the Draft Board I will sit down and try to write you a breezy letter. Meanwhile,

Affectionately.
