Dear Sumner:

Good morning!

You did yourself an injustice when you described your picture in the group as horrible. When, as a matter of fact, it was not at all an unattractive representation. If you had not been squinting, the picture would have been indeed a good one. I liked the rakish angle at which you wore your cap and I suppose that that is perfectly proper according to military Hoyle. You look clean shaven and what little of your suit can be seen seems to be well fitting. All in all it is really a fair picture and we are satisfied with that much for the present.

The campaign is progressing exceedingly satisfactorily and I feel sure that by Thursday night when the last reports are in and the campaign over, we will have gone well over our quota.

No special news here from the hospital except that Grandma is doing very well.

More later in the evening.

Affectionately,
