Why is This Important?

Becoming more involved with maternal health characteristics within your community, state, or the nation, will help provide a better scope of understanding on maternal health policies and how they can affect people that you know. Becoming familiar with these statistics and where to obtain them, can prepare the reader on potential effects of policy changes, such as, which communities will be more effected if change occurred, what demographics are more susceptible to outside influences and how to influence change for the better in this community. Ultimately, understanding where to go to get the information will keep you more informed for yourself and your family.
