Introduction to the New College of Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences

CAHS Students Create inUNDATION

Abbigail Shirk Wins Travel Scholarship

Elizabeth Bischof to Co-Curate Exhibit at Portland Museum of Art

Kate Cheney Chappell’s Generous Donation to Art Dept. & the Book Arts

Service Learning Broadens Students’ Options

Spring 2011 Events

Cover image by Art and Political Science student Johnathan Cook. Produced as part of the inUNDATION project 2010.
Welcome to the Newly Formed College of Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences

The College of Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences (CAHS) is the public liberal arts college of Maine’s cultural and professional center. We offer our diverse community of learners a high quality, affordable education with opportunities for engaged research, scholarship, and creative activity under the mentorship of a distinguished faculty. Our strong liberal and fine arts programs provide the heart and soul of the undergraduate experience at the University of Southern Maine.

The College is dedicated to providing the best comprehensive education possible to our students while providing a learning environment that cultivates independent thought. We offer a transformative curriculum that ranges from the theoretical frameworks that shape the social sciences to music performance, creative expression and media strategy. Our location in Maine’s population center provides unique opportunities for internships and service learning that complement our strong liberal arts and professional degrees at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. Students in our programs are given the opportunity to build skills and portfolios that capture these diverse experiences.

We teach students to reason effectively, write clearly, speak persuasively, think critically and ethically, and appreciate cultural diversity in order to meet the challenges of a rapidly changing and increasingly global community. Our goal is to educate our students to be global citizens with the capability to lead through understanding and compassion.

You can keep up with faculty, staff, and alumni events and information on our Facebook page. “Like” us to add our newsfeed to your wall: www.facebook.com/USMCAHS. You can also visit us online at www.usm.maine.edu/cas.
USM Students Mark inUNDATION
Affecting Environmental Awareness Through Art

For the last 10 years Professor Piribeck of the USM Art Department has been interested in the connection between art, science, and technology and has gradually introduced this connection in her courses. This fall she launched her biggest project yet: inUNDATION, a study of how we view land and our community both as artists and scientists.

The idea behind inUNDATION emerged from Professor Piribeck’s study of the tide line in Portland. As with most coastal communities, there is concern in Portland surrounding the rising tide line and the resulting loss of land along the shore. In the Back Cove neighborhood of Portland, this issue has moved to the forefront of many residents’ minds as every new storm, or astronomical high tide, floods a section of Cove Street at Marginal Way.

Many assume that this water is the result of overwhelmed drainage systems. In actuality, this water is coming up through the drains from the cove as the irrigation system gets overloaded with the rising tide, a process known as inundation.

Professor Piribeck and her students joined Vinton Valentine, Director of Graphic Information Systems (GIS) at USM, in plotting the data for Back Cove to mark the line where inundation will occur at the end of the century. She and her students then walked the line they drew in the lab to observe the landscape that will be lost when the water takes over. This line happens to fall along the Bayside Trail project that was completed last year. The work she and her students completed in the GIS lab allowed them to study the methodology behind determining the line of inundation, with the desired goal being an ability to understand the science behind community planning and how, as artists, they interpret the landscape.

In an effort to allow her students to better understand the landscape and their interaction with it, Professor Piribeck brought her students to the site of the future inUNDATION line so they could experience walking on land that would one day be underwater and reflect on their feelings about the space. To help her students put their emotions into words, she held a poetry workshop with Marty Pottenger, Director of Art at Work for the City of Portland, resulted in slogans, much like the Burma Shave slogans of the 1950s. Students then embedded their work into QR code to create a digital representation of the slogan. QR code is a visual representation of an image or data in the form of a digital code that can be read by cell phones.

The final product was an installation of art, poetry, and code along the inundation line. The event coincided with the 10/10/10 events planned by 350.org to raise awareness of the climate crisis and the immediate impact it has on our communities. This project was included in the Art in the Park “Student Public Art” Program sponsored by the Portland Public Art Committee. Participating students include: Rafaela Breitenberger; Frederick Clark; Ansell Hague; Casey Massman; David Atherton; Leigh Churchill; Kathleen Daniels; Milo Moyer-Battick; Johnathan Cook, cover art; and Laura Wurst.
Every semester since 2006, Professor Dennis Gilbert has led a group of approximately 40 Communication and Media Studies students in their Service Learning Practicum. The idea behind service learning is to allow students to directly and meaningfully apply what they are learning in the classroom to the real world while creating a community partnership. There are a great number of nonprofit organizations that contact Professor Gilbert every semester looking for a team of students to help with media-related projects. The benefits are many for both the students and the community organizations involved. The students find themselves meeting with project coordinators and board members to help educate them about what is possible for their organizations. In return, they learn what it is like to work in the professional world and be treated with respect, as experts in their field. As Professor Gilbert puts it, these projects “expand students’ breadth of knowledge about what’s going on in the community, people helping people.” He routinely hears from students that are, as a result of this experience, looking to work in the nonprofit sector after graduation.

This semester, Professor Gilbert had an alumnae of the program bring him a project. Deb Dunlap and Andrea Paul, who work for Community Partnership for Protecting Students, are launching a project called Parents as Partners. This mentor program aims to match parents that have successfully gotten their children back from the Child Protective Services Agency (CPS) in Maine with parents that have currently lost custody to CPS and want to get their children back. The students involved in the project will meet with the project leaders to develop a promotional media presentation for Parents as Partners.

Other community organizations he currently has students assigned to are: the Friends of Casco Bay, the Environmental Health Strategy Center, the Morris Center, Portland Water District, Rippling Waters, Portland Housing Authority, and Learning Works. He also has a number of students working with USM organizations such as Strive U, the USM School of Music, and the USM Mentor Program re-launch, which will include print and digital materials.

These students are not randomly assigned to projects. At the beginning of each semester, Professor Gilbert has students review the proposals and rank their top picks. He then shows students’ projects from prior years while assessing each current student’s strengths and weaknesses to create the best teams possible. The result is a team of students ready to help their community partner. To introduce students to service learning, Gilbert shows a film the department created about Kathryn Lasky, the USM professor responsible for starting this service learning program. Though Professor Lasky passed away in 2006, her legacy still lives strong in Professor Gilbert and his students. Every semester his students understand that they are a part of something larger and have their eyes opened to the possibilities available to them after graduation as well as the importance of work done in the nonprofit sector. They come away from their projects with experience in their profession, amazing final products for their portfolios, and, most importantly, a strong connection to the community of which they are a part.
Thanks to the generosity of Kate Cheney Chappell ('83), the ceramics studio in Gorham has been given new life. The renovations made possible by her gift include a new entrance and a renovation of the sculpture and woodworking studios. Funds were also given to create the Elizabeth Pope and Mary Pope Cheney Studio in the Wishcamper Center on the Portland campus to honor her mother and aunt.

In 2008, the Kate Cheney Chappell ('83) Center for Book Arts was established, which has provided valuable programming to the USM community under the leadership of Rebecca Goodale, Program Coordinator. Kate Cheney Chappell is a 1983 alumnae of the USM Communication and Media Studies Department and is, with her husband, co-founder of Tom’s of Maine. She works as a professional artist and wanted to share her love of book arts with the community.

For more information on the Kate Cheney Chappell ('83) Center for Book Arts and on Kate Cheney Chappell herself, visit http://www.usm.maine.edu/cas/bookarts.html
Imagine spending the spring semester in Jordan, studying Arabic and international relations, all while experiencing new cultures and broadening your worldview. USM senior Abbigail Shirk of South Portland no longer has to imagine.

Shirk, a political science major at USM, was awarded the Benjamin Gilman International Scholarship for Study Abroad, which will help pay for her spring 2011 semester in Amman, Jordan.

While overseas, Shirk is learning Arabic and studying political science through the Council on International Educational Exchange’s (CIEE) Language and Culture Program. Before she left, Shirk said she’d never learned a language before, but wasn’t worried. “I’ll be doing a ‘home stay’ with a family over there, so I will be completely immersed in the language. I think it will help me learn faster.” She is taking her classes at the University of Jordan in Amman.

Shirk decided to go to Jordan because she sees it as a place she might not get the chance to visit in her professional life. “Places like Jordan and Egypt are really at the forefront of what’s happening in the world. I’m excited to see what’s really going on over there. I want to look beyond the American newspapers and media, and make my own opinions.”

She plans on going into politics after graduation in May 2011, and is currently applying to law schools. “I ultimately see myself in politics. It’s so current and exciting. I like new projects and new developments.”

The Gilman Scholarship is sponsored by the U.S. Department of State’s Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs. The scholarship was established in 2000 and is named after Congressman Benjamin Gilman, who served in the House of Representatives for 30 years. Since its establishment, the scholarship has helped 6,500 students nationwide to study abroad.

For more information on travel abroad programs at the USM, contact the Office of International Programs at (207) 780-4959 or visit them online at: http://usm.maine.edu/international/.

If you would like to support other students’ academic experiences abroad please contact Susan Palmer in University Advancement at spalmer@usm.maine.edu or by phone at (207) 780-4804.
Sam Shupe to Present Paper at 22nd Annual International Cycling History Conference

History Major

In his own words

My name is Sam Shupe and I am a senior history major at USM. I will be graduating in May 2011. During the fall semester of 2010, I completed an independent senior thesis research project under the direction of Professor Libby Bischof, entitled: "I am an Old Wheelman: John Calvin Stevens Art of Bicycling 1880-1900." My paper discusses lesser-known aspects of the prominent nineteenth-century Portland architect's life: his love of the bicycle as well as a fifty-day architectural bicycle tour of France he organized and rode in the summer of 1892.

This past February, my paper was accepted at the 22nd Annual International Cycling History Conference (ICHC), held this May at the Conservatoire National des Arts et Matiers in Paris, France. I will be presenting my paper to an international audience of senior scholars and it will be published in a conference proceedings. This is a truly unique opportunity and a great way to end my undergraduate experience at USM.

Continued on next page

CAHS Spring 2011 Calendar of Events

The Orb and the Octopus: Amy Ray and John Jennison
March 3 - April 28, 2011, Area Gallery, Woodbury Campus Center, Portland
Two USM Art alumni present individual and collaborative black & white drawings.
For more information, contact the Art Gallery at (207) 780-5008

A Celebration of the Music of Liszt 200 Years After His Birth - April 1, 2011
Anastasia Antonacos, solo piano
Corthell Concert Hall, USM Gorham. Sponsored by H. M. Payson & Co.
For more information, call the USM Music Box Office at 780-5555.

USM Professor and Art Alumnus Accepted for the 2011 Portland Museum of Art Biennial - April 7, 2011 - June 5, 2011
The University of Southern Maine is pleased to congratulate Professor of Art Michael Shaughnessy and USM Alumnus Tyson Jacques ('07), who were accepted into the Portland Museum of Art (PMA) 2011 Biennial, which will open on April 7.

English Department Alumni Social Event - April 8, 2011, 5:00 - 7:00 PM
This event brings English alumni, current majors, and faculty for a get-together.
Contact the English Department for more information (207) 780-4117

Matters of Perception - April 8, 2011 - May 24, 2011
Reception, Friday, April 8, 2011, 6:00 - 8:00 PM, LAC Art Gallery
Juried exhibition by artists with disabilities, organized by VSA Arts of Maine.
For more information, contact the Art Gallery at (207) 780-5008

Bachelor of Fine Arts Exhibition - April 15 - May 6, 2011
Opening: Friday, April 15, 2011, 6:00 - 8:00 PM
USM Art Gallery, Gorham Campus
For more information, contact the Art Gallery at (207) 780-5008

Harvey - April 22, 2011 - May 1, 2011
A comedy with whiskers
Play by Mary Chase, Directed by William Steele
Opening performance will be followed by a reception.

Under the mentorship of USM undergraduates, 400 high school students from around New England gather to debate international issues through simulating United Nations deliberations on the Gorham Campus of USM. Contact Julia Edwards in the Department of Political Science for more information or to volunteer (207) 780-4194.
Sam Shupe
Continued from pg 7

Maine bicycle history and culture has been a topic of research and interest for me for several years and USM has supported me from the start. I began researching the topic during a History Department internship with the Maine State Historian, Earle G. Shettleworth, Jr. Over the last year, I have also worked at the Osher Map Library. USM and the wider Portland community have been places where I have been able to apply my academic training, to connect my class work to the "real world." Professor Libby Bischof was the coordinator of my internship and has continued to be indispensable in my academic development.

She has given me endless support inside and outside of class. Professor Bischof has tirelessly edited, critiqued, and strengthened my work and without her and the support of USM I would not have been able to do field work or independent research. USM has provided me with a solid educational foundation that I will carry with me to graduate school. I have recently been accepted into the American and New England Studies PhD program at Boston University. Throughout my four years, USM has supported my academic goals and ambitions, and I am truly excited to represent USM in Paris.

Those that would like to support students like Sam in their efforts to travel abroad through scholarships should contact Sue Palmer in Advancement (207) 780-4804.