Maine Gay Men's Chorus: Music, Theatre, Activism... A Cultural Treasure

"These chorus performances have almost as much to do with theatre as they do with music." "The political/activist energy of the song was a nice reminder that the chorus, as a cultural treasure, is also its own brand of activism and cultural confrontation." These are comments about the Maine Gay Men's Chorus, which will perform a benefit concert for ACLA at the Bates College Chapel on Friday, December 5, at 8 PM. There will be a reception with members of the chorus after the concert.

Despite recent scientific breakthroughs and the development of treatments that could potentially prolong and improve the quality life for people living with AIDS, there is still no cure. This year, in honor of World AIDS Day, ACLA offers you an opportunity to share a wonderful evening of entertainment and emotion, while providing support for ACLA's work.

Tickets are $10 in advance, $12 at the door.

GIVE CHILDREN HOPE IN A WORLD WITH AIDS

Monday, December 1, 1997, will mark the Ninth Annual Observance of World AIDS Day, an event sponsored worldwide by UNAIDS (Joint United Nations Program on HIV/AIDS).

This year's theme is
"Give Children Hope in a World with AIDS."

Maine has been fortunate to have a relatively low rate of HIV infection among its children, However...

there are still many children who are directly affected by the epidemic. Sons and daughters, nieces and nephews, suffer from the worry, the fear, and the stigma that PWA's and their families all experience. And other children hear about AIDS and develop fears of their own.

"Children are ready to learn about HIV and AIDS as soon as they are old enough to come across the subject on their own, overhearing a parental conversation or a report on television news...if for no other reason than to put their young minds at ease concerning HIV as a potential threat to them....some sort of AIDS education should be initiated as early as kindergarten."

Douglas Tonks, Teaching AIDS, 1996

The AIDS Coalition's program, Children Reaching Out: Art for AIDS Awareness, helps children deal with their fears by giving them a chance to talk to a person with HIV and to express their feelings about AIDS through art projects. We'll be working mostly with sixth graders, and piloting the program in a few kindergartens and 2nd and 4th grades.
