Biographical Note

Esther Elizabeth Wood was a native of Maine and spent her childhood at Friend's Corner, a rural region in the eastern part of the State. It was named for her paternal great-grandfather who settled there in the 1820's. By 1900 there were only 6 families in the neighborhood and only 7 children attending the schoolhouse on the hilltop. Four of Esther's cousins, who were her contemporaries, lived in the region. Her parents often talked about her grandparents, great-grandparents and great uncles, one of whom died in China and one in the Civil War. Their houses and fields became home to her family. Both her father and her mother taught school and Esther could not remember when she did not know about teachers and teaching. She went to sleep thinking about the midnight ride of Paul Revere and was called to dinner from outdoor play by her mother's school bell. In 1976 Esther wrote an interesting account of her reminiscences, Country Fare, with family recipes from her Maine childhood.

She received an A.B. degree from Colby College and an A.M. degree from Radcliffe College and was a professor of Social Sciences and History at Gorham State Teachers College from 1930 to 1972. During that time she taught Civics, Current History, Greek and Roman History and U.S. History, and also served as a dean of women.

Esther was a very popular teacher and was best remembered for her enjoyable classes. The year after her retirement, "The Towers" were dedicated at Gorham State Teachers College, named for Esther and for Edna F. Dickey, another History teacher. These unique twin structures are each round in contour and 8 stories high. They were constructed to serve as dormitories.

As an author, Esther wrote for Maine Life and for the Ellsworth American. She was very well known and liked by all of her numerous acquaintances.
