Faculty Grant Programs

The Metropolitan University Initiative is pleased to announce the awards of three faculty development opportunities for the 2015-16 academic year:

• The Engaged Faculty Fellows Program awarded eight grants of $2,500 each to faculty interested in revising or creating an academic course that embeds civic engagement or/and service learning.

• The Engaged Department, Cluster, or Faculty Interest Group Grant Program awarded five grants of $5,000 to plan, establish, implement, and evaluate strategic initiatives that advance the integration of civic engagement into the department's/cluster's research and teaching activities.

• The Community-Based Mini-Grants Program awarded four grants of $5,000 to support community-based research projects, i.e., the application of knowledge through research to the solution of community problems.

Background:

The Metropolitan University Steering Group’s final report, Forging a New Identity, recommended a significant investment in faculty development around community engagement. This investment in faculty development grant programs, based on recommendations from the Engaged Faculty Development Workgroup, will help create capacity in community engagement as well as develop a community of practice.
