CLASS ODE

Tune: "Londonderry Air"

*Soon end these years
As Spring must end, and flowers die . . .
All lovely things slip into memory
The song crescendos on a note of sadness
For this farewell cannot but bring us tears.
Today it vanishes; tomorrow, lingers on . . .
The silent echo of its melody
Mirrors the passing of a thousand happy hours
And in reflection holds them ever captured there.*

*If you have found a deeper understanding
Of what life is, or what your own could be
If you have gained a friend, or built a new ideal
These fleeting years have measured deep and full.
The song is fading, and the picture slowly blurs . . .
But will grow dearer, mellowed by the years. .
In Gorham's past our little histories remain;
We set our eager hearts on what may lie ahead.*
