"Mildest of men, and most beloved,"—with these words, we dedicate this 1955 edition of the STAG to Mr. Robert F. Goff, friend and adviser to the members of our class, and a source of true inspiration to us.

Mr. Goff, serving as faculty adviser to the Longhair Club, helped build our interest in the great musical works; as glee club moderator, he promoted the love of song among us; as librarian, he has shown us the way to achieve an intelligent, practical regard for literature; as an instructor, he provided us with an ever-present example of honesty, sincerity, and devotion.

On the lighter side, we have learned from him what delightful food can be served at a Longhair Club meeting, how STRONG coffee should really be made.

Selflessly devoted to the college and its students, Mr. Goff has given many hours of his "free" time for extra instruction for those students in need of it, and his constant devotion to the work of the pre-college section has proved an invaluable aid to those students, many of whom have been away from school for several years.

"Mr. Goff, we thank you. Seldom is an instructor found with as great a devotion and love for his students as we have discovered you to have. May many happy years await you; we know that you will always find a warm spot in the hearts of all of us."

Dean Luther I. Bonney

A native of Turner, Maine, Dean Luther I. Bonney was valedictorian of Leavitt Institute, class of 1901. During the next year he taught a term at the district school, before entering Bates College in 1902, graduating with general honors in 1906. He was awarded Phi Beta Kappa at Bates when the chapter was founded there. From 1906 to 1915, the Dean taught Latin and Greek at Dean Academy in Franklin, Massachusetts.

In 1915 he went to Middlebury College as assistant professor in mathematics, leaving in 1926 as a full professor. While at Middlebury, he acted as dean of men in 1923-24.

After a year of graduate work in political science and economics at Johns Hopkins University, Dean Bonney went into business in Portland, from 1926 to 1933.

He was one of the founders of Portland Junior College and served as Educational Director from the time of its incorporation until he was made Dean in 1938. Dean Bonney has been active in the guidance department of local schools. He received an honorary Master's Degree from Bates College in 1949.

In Memoriam

“Doug” Gullifer

Together with his innumerable friends all over the city, we, the students of P.J.C., class of ’53, have missed “Doug” Gullifer, who passed away November 9, 1952.

“Doug” was one of those few persons who have the faculty for never being disagreeable and making friends everywhere—he was a friend to all who knew him. We will miss his friendship in the future, but we can gain great profit from this ever-present example of courage and resourcefulness.

What greater tribute can be paid to any man than to say: “He was a friend.”

William Armstrong

It is said that in the twilight of a man’s life, he looks back across the years to his youth and lives again those revered days, mellowed with the passing of time.

There is no doubt in our minds that this harmless but lively old man will be the subject of many of those daydreams. The irritation caused by youthful cares will be gone then, and we will better appreciate the character of this independent Irishman. Certainly, in the light of experience and wisdom, we will feel better able to understand this gentleman who perhaps tired us in frustration of our personal desires.

Already, in just the few weeks he has been gone we have missed him—how much more shall we, while reminiscing as we near another meeting with him?

He did his job well and lived by his creed—pray God that we may do the same.

THE CLASS OF 1953

In the Fall, we assembled at Portland Junior College. We were even then the class of 1953, but we were a divided group, identifying ourselves with our various and scattered home towns. Now, at graduation time, we have come to identify ourselves with Portland Junior College. We are homogeneous, one class, with one spirit.

That spirit is a product of many factors. Our personalities have been modified by our classmates. Because of our common search for knowledge, we have become a closely knit group. Because of our extra-curricular activities such as athletics, the college's various clubs, and simple after-class conversation, a spirit has been kindled within us. Because of our instructors, we have gained further insight into the value of study. Finally, we have become not just students at college, but students proud of Portland Junior College.

Now we are about to separate and go our various ways again. Many who came here intending to go only to junior college have now decided to complete their college education elsewhere. Some will enter the service of our country. Others will enter the working world. One by one, we will marry and raise families. Wherever we are and whatever we are doing, though, our love for Portland Junior will remain with us. In a few years, when we are all working successfully in our chosen fields, we will remember that Portland Junior College gave us our start.

It is with this spirit in mind that we dedicate our senior yearbook, "The Stag"; to Portland Junior College and all its component elements. Here's to our instructors and their patient, understanding guidance. Here's to our classmates and our other schoolmates, the Class of 1954. Here's to our athletic teams and our clubs, and to the coach and advisors of those groups. Here's to the classrooms, the cafeteria, the gym. Here's to Portland Junior College, not just an institution, but a living thing, the object of our everlasting respect and affection.

Freshman Class History

We the class of "54," although not the largest class ever to enter the hallowed halls of P.J.C., feel that we certainly can compare with even the largest, both in school spirit and in willingness to learn. A fairly even distribution of veterans and fresh high school graduates kept our class lively, and yet gave us that sense of responsibility which is indispensable in all good students.

Our class elections were slightly overshadowed by another election between two gentlemen named Eisenhower and Stevenson (Eisenhower won), but even with this impediment they proved very thrilling and served as a true example of how good elections should be run off (free coffee, cigarettes, music). The final winners of this struggle were Sterling Davis, president; Morton Billings, vice-president; Russell Cahill, secretary-treasurer; and Donald Doane and James Cressey, Executive Committee. Later in the year, when Mr. Davis was forced to leave school, Mr. Billings took over as President, and Krally Toulourmris was elected Vice-President.

We provided the majority of the strength for the basketball and baseball teams, and made good showings in the Outing, Long Hair, Radio and Circle K Clubs. There were many other activities prevalent both on and off the campus in which freshmen had much to do, but perhaps it is better to let them rest in peace if they can.

Although we are sure that all of the students in the class put in long, hard hours studying every night, only two managed to make the first semester Dean's List. They were Larry Simpson and John Honan.

On the whole, we should all agree that this year at P.J.C. has been a very happy one, and that whether we return here next year or not, we will always remember, first, our Campus, which may not be the most imposing in the state, but which does have a friendly and homey atmosphere all its own (once you learn where the mudholes are); second, our teachers who have worked with us so closely throughout the year, and who have proved themselves such true friends and gentlemen; and third, and perhaps most important, the friends we have made throughout the year, many of whom could influence our lives greatly in the years to come.

As our final act, we, the members of the freshman class, would like to wish good luck to the graduating class. And with that, we become members of the next graduating class.

The Pre-College Program

Our present pre-college courses had their origin in 1946 when large numbers of Maine veterans put down their weapons and turned again to "book learning," in an effort to resume the studies which the war had, of necessity, interrupted. Although some returned to the high schools, many found that their needs would be better served by enrolling in our "Refresher Courses," as they were then called.

These courses were, and continue to be, "accelerated," enabling the competent and more mature veteran to earn, in one semester, credits equivalent to a year's work in high school. Such acceleration permits the veteran to partially compensate for the loss of schooling occasioned by his years of service in the armed forces, and also (because of its greater demands upon his ability and seriousness of purpose) offers him a challenge which would be hard to duplicate on any other secondary school level. It has been our observation that this challenge has been successfully met by many of our pre-college students.

In addition to important academic benefits, the Pre-College Program offers its student a valuable foretaste of college environment. They have the opportunity to share, without discrimination, in all the social activities of the college students, and to participate in the important deliberations of the Student Council.

As long as any real need for it exists, it is likely that the Pre-College Program will continue in force, either in its present form or, if deemed advisable, in the form of a full year of non-accelerated college preparatory work.
The Circle K Club

Extra-curricular activities at P.J.C. received a veritable 'shot in the arm' early in the second semester, when the first Circle K club in New England was established here at the college.

Representatives from the Portland Kiwanis Club and the New England regional organization conducted a special assembly in the P.J.C. auditorium on March 16, at which time the aims and purposes of the Circle K were explained to the student body, and a call was made for all those who would like to join the group. Circle K is a junior organization of Kiwanis International, similar to the Key clubs organized in several local high schools. It has a basic purpose of service to the community, the school, and especially to the underprivileged. It was emphasized, however, that members will find in the club an opportunity for personal development and self-help.

Thirty-eight prospective members were present at the initial meeting following the assembly, at which time the following club officers were elected: Carroll Cutting, president; Ronald Vincent, vice-president; Russell Cahill, secretary; and Harvey Elliot, treasurer. Two directors were also elected from each of the classes: freshmen: Peter Lekouses and Larry Simpson; seniors: Robert Olsen and Frank Maguire.

A club charter was applied for by these officers, which would make the club the first Circle K club to be organized at any New England college. Requirements for membership were a certain good scholastic standing, plus the approval of the Dean.

As sponsoring organization, the Portland Kiwanis Club invited one of the club members to each of its weekly meetings.

Mr. John Keenan, of the faculty, was appointed advisor to the group, which held regular meetings through the second semester.

It is hoped that Circle K will continue to be the active and beneficial group which it now has become, for we realize that it can prove of great help to all concerned.

The Radio Club

"Portland Junior College - On The Air!" After a lapse of several years, the radio club was reorganized during the first semester of this year. Under the direction of Mr. John Jaques, the club prepared and broadcast a program every Tuesday night over WPOR, in Portland.

A wide variety of programs was presented, covering topics of current and general interest, from a Presidential Election Roundtable, "A Trip to the Moon," and a City Manager Government discussion, to a special Christmas show.

"P.J.C. on The Air" was staffed by a large number of students from the college, and Clare Ripley and Donald Doane acted as regular announcers. The program themes were discussed at weekly club meetings, after which an individual committee was appointed to prepare for each show.

Because of the growth of other student activities, decrease in student interest, and the addition of several new classes to Mr. Jaques' already crowded schedule for the second semester, the club was forced to halt operations in January.

The club feels that it has aided in promoting and publicizing P.J.C. in the community, and helped the students in developing their self-expression and assertiveness.

We hope that the club will soon be revived, realizing that it can be utilized as a practical and useful voice of Portland Junior College.
The Outing Club

Revived after a year's absence, the Outing Club this year again came to the front as a popular activity on and off the P.J.C. campus. Led by faculty advisor Mr. Alfred E. Clarke, the group planned frequent excursions into the wilds.

A deer hunting trip was made to Phil Lenentine's camp on the holiday weekend just before Thanksgiving, and the club later put on a skit, which tried to be hilarious, during a school assembly, to show non-club members what they had missed.

Week-end fishing trips were held, including an ice fishing stay at Larry Simpson's Sebago camp, and a regular expedition into the North via overland jeep to Carrie Pond, far beyond the reaches of civilization.

Skiing trips were discussed, but did not pass the planning stage, mainly owing to the lack of co-operation by Mother Nature, who failed to provide the snow which is usually deemed necessary for such an outing.

At an early meeting of the club, Carroll Cutting was elected president, together with this board: Brad Seabury - Cabin and Trail, Louis Maguire - Skiing, Larry Simpson - Hunting and Fishing, Charles Smith - Rifle team.

All in all, the re-awakened Outing Club has proven itself a success, and its activities, as will be attested to by any of the active members, were enjoyable diversions from the ordinary run of College life.
Portland Junior College News

The News was the first activity to begin this year—Brad Seabury and Frank Maguire, junior staff of the previous year, broke into the office with a borrowed key, right after the opening day assembly. After fighting their way across the thirty-seven and one-half (it was broken) chairs stored in the room during the summer, they uncovered the typewriter and wrote a lengthy article about the assembly. Unfortunately, due to circumstances beyond control, the first issue did not come out until a month and a half later, at which time such a congregation of news and feature articles had collected that the first effort had to be reduced to a five-line paragraph at the end of another article.

The two seniors mentioned above each aspired to be Editor-in-chief and struggled so mightily for the position that the Student Council elected them co-editors. Norman “Doc” Fournier turned out a sparkling sports column for the paper and Larry “Sarcastic” Hoadley insulted the students monthly through the editorials. Alumni Editor Weston Dyer kept tabs on the more than twelve hundred alumni to whom the issues are sent. John H. Honan, Jr., was elected Feature Editor after Larry Hoadley signed up with the Marine Corps, and Norman Fournier’s position was filled upon his departure for the Air Force by Donald Raymond. Louis Maguire and Philip Boivin were chosen as assistant editors, in order to assure next year’s class of having experienced hands at the helm of the P.J.C. News.

The aims of the school paper are three in number: (1) to inform the students of campus activities, (2) to inform the alumni of campus news, and (3) to provide a permanent record of the school history. The co-editors this year added two more aims to the general principles: (4) to promote extracurricular activity participation among the new students, and (5) to promote friendly relations between P.J.C. and Westbrook Junior College.

Under the competent supervision of Mr. Richard Woodbury, Editor of the Portland Sunday Telegram, who acted as faculty advisor of the News, the staff followed a monthly schedule of publication. This year the school provided a large percentage of the cost of the paper, in consideration of the number of issues sent to alumni, relieving the small staff of much of its labor to secure sufficient advertisements. This was a great help, since the cost of printing has been constantly going up during the last few years.

Entrusted with the oldest extra-curricular activity at P.J.C., the News Staff this year has strived to produce a paper which would measure up to the fine publications of past years. Although hindered by a dearth of staff members, and encumbered by lack of interest, we have done our best in the publication of the P.J.C. News.

Dean's List

Work, brains, and luck!

Anyone with these qualities is potentially a member of the Dean's List. An average of 3.2 or better is the line which separates the "brains" from the "students."

The purpose of having a Dean's List is to motivate the student to attain the highest possible grades. Having made the Dean's List, the student has a well-earned feeling of prestige.

Indeed, the student has every reason to be proud of this achievement, for only one student out of twenty ever makes the grade. On the other hand, credit must be given to the unfortunates who compile an average of 3.1 points.

Asked what the ingredients of his success were, a member of the Dean's List stated, "Attentiveness in class, and concentration at home on studies rather than on T.V."
The Student Council

Once again, the council assumed its major role in campus activities. This organization represents the student body in order to bring about greater cooperation between the college administration and the student body.

Another function of the student council is to satisfy the desires of the student body that pertain to organizing clubs, assemblies, and improvements of the campus.

Other activities of the council were the renovating of room 101 into a new student lounge, installing a juke box for the "caf," running the Harvest Hop and 53 Jamboree, co-sponsoring a dance with W.J.C., organizing college assemblies, participating in the annual Parent-Teachers Night, sending two delegates to Wellesley College for the United States National Student Association conference, and running a Spring outing which ended the activities of the council for this year.

This year, the council had as its underlying motto "Progress, man's distinctive mark alone." With suggestions from the students and faculty, the council has attempted to progress or advance in a manner which is benefiting, both scholastically and socially, to the college and mark P.J.C. as a distinctive institution.

Harold Tibbetts.
College Life At P.J.C.

SPORTS
Basketball

The Stags suffered their greatest loss of the season, or any other season, at the superior hands of New Hampshire in a 101 to 37 defeat.

After five straight defeats at the beginning of the season the Stags finally rallied to a victory over Ricker Junior College 76 - 73 making it the second time the Green and White had faced them.

With another loss in their seventh game the Stags came into their own with three impressive victories which looked as if they were on their way; but hopes were soon shattered. The team continued for the rest of the season with intermittent losses and winnings to close a season that had been diligently played and fought with the true spirit of sportsmen, and established a record of 7 games won and 13 losses.

Although the records do not show an outstanding season for 52-53, it cannot be denied that we saw some very fine ball handling on the courts; this is evidenced by the fact that Freeman (Skin) Dulac rolled in 357 points to take top honors of the season, trailed at a good pace by Phil Clancy with 172 and Dick Davis with 167.

Even though Davis only managed to get nine starts out of the first eleven games (before being called in the Marines) he still held the highest average points per game at the close of the season with 18.56.

The Stags had a good center in Phil Boivin and still more staunch support in Carroll Cutting and Joe Harper as forwards, and Bob Monterio and Larry Simpson as guards.

Baseball

Baseball has returned again to P.J.C. with the biggest turnout ever. Twenty-two hopefuls were on hand for the first day of Spring practice; and in the optimistic view of the manager Joe Harper, "It looks like a good year ahead."

Some of the foremost candidates in view at present are Dick Redmond of the 1917 Portland All-Telegram League; recent Deering are Freeman (Skin) Dulac, a first baseman with ability who could also come in handy on the mound; and Bob Ward, a recent Portland High infielder.

Some of the candidates for outfield are Bob Fantelli, Lou Maguire, Mark Knowles, Rolland O'Donal, Don Raymond, Harry Hansen, Joe Marks and Carrol Cutting, with infielders Larry Simpson, Bob Monterio, Frank Caron, Dulac and Ward.

Brightest prospect for hurlers seems to be ex-Deering High's Doug Wilkerson, with Phil Boivin and John Arnold next in line for some of the Stag hurling.

In baked beans, as in other foods, it pays to buy the best. That's why you should always choose exremely delicious B & M Brick-Oven Baked Beans,
New England's long-time favorites for extra-good quality and flavor. They're actually baked all day (not steamed) with juicy pork and tangy sauces 'till they're delightfully mealy and tender and a royal treat to the taste. Burnham & Morrill Company,
