DEDICATION

Yes, you and I know him. We've seen him in the cafeteria, on the campus, or just hanging around chinning with his fellow brethren of the collegiate clan. He was a nobody yet a somebody; he was the guy next to us in math, history, and English. He was the fellow who got the A's, and the fellow who flunked, and no matter where you went he was there.

He provoked his fellow classmates; he made them laugh; his teachers even contemplated homicide, but there were times when he filled their hearts with a teachers' reward; he made the Dean's list.

He played baseball and basketball, from the sidelines he cheered; he worked on the News; he belonged to the clubs; he had been tardy and absent, and his homework he shirked, but that is all behind him now.

He joined the army, navy, marines, and the air force, and perhaps headed for fame, yet his fellow classmates will long remember his name, for well they should; he's one of us. A man from P.J.C. A soldier of his Country!

DEAN LUTHER I. BONNEY

Dean's Message

The great task of the times for us, both as individuals and as nations, is to build faith; faith in ourselves, faith in others, faith in God.

In this task a good place to begin is with ourselves. People and nations in general have special talents capable of marvelous development. The unfolding of these talents when rightly nurtured should be accompanied by an ever-deepening reverence for the divine gifts increasingly revealed. This reverence for the mystery within is a valid basis for faith in self on the part of individuals and of nations.

When a man or a nation has achieved a true faith in self, faith in others and faith in God follows. Faith in God of course underlies and includes all faith. Fortunate are the people and the nations that have it. Many must achieve it.

As humans we are inclined to be impatient with the slow processes that are ushering in the kingdom. We are often deeply disturbed when some of our petty plans go awry. But when we consider the finer aspirations of our own being and the marvels of the infinite universe we must believe that in the long reaches of eternity God will not fail.

The Class of 1951

We of the class of 1951 are no longer students, but alumni of Portland Junior College. Nevertheless, deep down in our hearts, I am sure that we will always be more than alumni of P. J. C., for this college has filled a true need for most of us. And, because of this, our eyes will be focused on the progress and further development of this institution for many years to come.

Seniors and freshmen have had a common bond here, for we have carried out our activities not as groups of seniors and freshmen, but as P. J. C. students as a whole. We have not had beautiful dormitories and "frat" houses, but in spite of this, we have molded a dominant school spirit. Whether it be in the cafeteria, talking with fellow students and teachers over a cup of coffee, at the YMCA in sports, or during classes, we all have made friends who will never leave our memories.

Again, looking back upon our days at P. J. C., we can easily see that we have gained an insight into the complexities of the world, and more important, we have made heavy gains in self-knowledge. Fortunately are we to have been in a college where the development of the individual has not been sidetracked by an overemphasis on strictly academic learning.

For these many things which we have gained at P. J. C., we owe our deepest gratitude to as fine a faculty as can be found in any college or university. They are men who have taught us to live, as well as to be efficient in academic studies.

Freshman Class History

Here in these halls, famed for their alchemy of turning bumpkin and slicker alike into Men of Distinction, the Class of '52 takes stock of its virtues and shortcomings . . . with an eye to improvement . . . providing September finds us gracing halls other than those of Montezuma!

If we were to assume that the whole is greater than any of its parts, then the importance of our 130 members far outruns the individual merit of fame. Admittedly, we haven't painted the campus (leastways, not with brush and white lead), nor have we attempted to raise the instructors' salaries. Nevertheless, we have fulfilled the primary requisites of first-year college life, and surprised ourselves in the bargain with a definite increase in our own stock.

Active participation has been established by this class in the institutions known as the Outing, Drama, and French Clubs . . . as well as other Portland Junior College customs, notorious, but not so freely publicized.

Perhaps our class has endeared itself to the faculty no less by its appetite for learning than by its extravagant appetite that searched for appeasement in the cafeteria. We have truly been supplied with nourishment beneficial to both the inner and outer man here at Portland Junior College. And if the song writers don't compose too many new tunes next year, the Class of '53 will appreciate our magnificent accumulation of sheet music in the cafeteria. At any rate, they'll at least have a good idea of what was popular before "Over There" became a third-time, all-time hit tune.

Pleasant and productive hours have been rolled up in classrooms which have witnessed the gamut of individual expression . . . where everything from Shakespearean criticism to ukelele playing has been soundly demonstrated.

It is with grateful thanks for the help and encouragement we have been given, and with honest anticipation mingled with a certain unavoidable trepidation, that the Class of '52 relinquishes forever its title, "Freshmen".

PRE - COLLEGE

The Pre-College Division

The Pre-College Program

Our present pre-college courses had their origin in 1946 when large numbers of Maine veterans put down their weapons and turned again to "book learning", in an effort to resume the studies which the war had, of necessity, interrupted. Although some returned to the high schools, many found that their needs would be better served by enrolling in our "Refresher Courses", as they were then called.

These courses were, and continue to be, "accelerated", enabling the competent and more mature veteran to earn, in one semester credits equivalent to a year's work in high school. Such acceleration permits the veteran to partially compensate for the loss of schooling occasioned by his years of service in the armed forces, and also (because of its greater demands upon his ability and seriousness of purpose) offers him a challenge which would be hard to duplicate on any other secondary school level. It has been our observation that this challenge has been successfully met by many of our pre-college students.

In addition to important academic benefits, the Pre-College Program offers its students a valuable foretaste of college environment. They have the opportunity to share, without discrimination, in all the social activities of the college students, and to participate in the important deliberations of the Student Council.

As long as any real need for it exists, it is likely that the Pre-College Program will continue in force, either in its present form or, if deemed advisable, in the form of a full year of non-accelerated college preparatory work.

The Dramatic Club

The Portland Junior College Dramatic Club is one of the most industrious and also one of the youngest organizations in the college—being only two years old. In this brief period it has accomplished several difficult tasks: producing some very excellent plays; presenting entertainment in the form of skits and the Club Thespiana; and it has also managed to remain in existence, which proves it is a popular club.

Last year two choice productions were presented (with the assistance of Westbrook Junior College). The first to appear was "Love Rides the Rails" or "Will the Mail Train Ride Tonight". This was a melodrama and was received very well by those who attended it. The other major production was "Rebecca", which was indeed a difficult play to bring to life. Although the audience was not large on either night, the arduous task of presenting this play was rewarded in the form of high praise from those who attended and especially from certain people quite capable of evaluating acting ability and production techniques.

This year a new course has been added to the P. J. C. assortment—a class in drama. This course supplements the work of the Dramatic Club with such activities as building a portable stage and instructing its members in different aspects of the drama. As might be expected, all students taking this course also belong to the Dramatic Club, and naturally the competent Mr. Carl French, faculty advisor of the club, is the instructor.

The activities of the Dramatic Club this year consist of a short play, written by Mr. French, and presented during the Christmas season and a regular three act play to be given later in the spring. The efforts of the new class in the drama will aid this work.

Not to be forgotten, of course, are the club officers. For President Ed. Pulsifer was selected and a wiser choice could not have been made. Last year Ed. proved his worth to the club with his estimable acting and directing triumphs.

The Outing Club

Portland Junior College has many clubs in which students may spend their spare time enjoying themselves. The Outing Club, which attracts the outdoor type, offers various kinds of sports. The members have a choice of skiing, hiking, riflery, sailing, fishing, and many others, in season.

The first official meeting of 1950-51 was held October 30, 1950. The election of officers highlighted the meeting.

Mountain Day, an annual event sponsored by the Outing Club, was held at Bradbury Mountain State Park under the direction of last year's officers and members early in the fall. This year's club will sponsor a similar outing at Sebago Lake State Park in the spring.

November 15, 1950, the day the Outing Club put on their annual Oldtimers' Day Parade! The citizens of greater Portland will never forget that day. Traffic was tied up for half an hour in Monument Square while club members went through antics rarely seen in these parts. Following the demonstration in Portland the troupe of clowns and musicians invaded the campus at Westbrook Junior College just in time to catch the changing classes. The parade was the major part of a publicity drive to bring the students of greater Portland to the Oldtimers' Day dance held in the college auditorium Friday, November 17, 1950. The auditorium was decorated to resemble a barn, with lanterns, hay, and wagon wheels for atmosphere. Dancers wore old clothes to fit the occasion. One of the highlights of the dance was the annual beard contest. Students were given a month to grow beards, which were judged at the dance. Ed. Pulsifer, a club member, was the winner over nine other bearded participants.

During the year President McGlaufflin took several groups on hikes up Mount Washington.

A weekend skiing trip to the Dartmouth Ski Lodge on Mount Moosilauke, New Hampshire, was planned, but had to be cancelled for the lack of snow.

The members of 1950's Outing Club sincerely wish the club members of the future success in their meetings and whatever ventures they undertake.

Portland Junior College News

The P. J. C. News began the year of 1950 and 1951 under more than usual difficulties. The majority of those who were associated with the News in the preceding year had either entered the armed forces or transferred to other fields. The staff of this year had to learn the hard way, from experience.

Starting from scratch, the Freshman staff took on the task of publishing a newspaper with complete news coverage. With the aid of Mr. Richard Woodbury, Editor of the Portland Sunday Telegram, and Mr. John Keenan as faculty advisor, they began to learn the functions of a college newspaper.

A significant change was made in the organization of the News staff. The election of the officers was handled by the members of the News themselves rather than by the Student Council as in former years.

That the change was a wholesome one is evidenced by the general quality of the News, the increased amount of advertising, and the introduction of a new feature—cartoons.

The Student Council

War and the threat of war lay heavy on the world as the college year of 1950-51 opened. The resulting uncertainties were reflected in the attitudes and outlook of students. The usual enthusiastic interest in college activities was dulled by the shadow of impending events. Unanswered questions as to military and draft status added to the confusion in student minds.

Thus under unsettled conditions the New Council undertook its responsibilities. The Council presented a mock meeting at an assembly as its introduction to the student body. Then came the problems of budget and student activities. Reduced enrollment resulted in less available funds. The problem of transportation for athletic teams was solved by an appropriation for the purpose of providing a suitable vehicle, now known as "the hearse". Funds were also made available to meet the needs of all clubs, publications, and other college activities.

Two new amendments were added to the Constitution this year, all in due process. All traditional activities, including Mountain Day and the Annual Christmas Home-Coming Dance, have been carried on.

The Council this year has been the first to operate fully under the Constitution adopted last year. It has been a profitable experience. The road has not been smooth; yet, our springs have been elastic enough to absorb the bumps and roll on.

It is the sincere hope of the retiring Council that a new college year will open with world tensions relaxed and the campus humming again under its normal load of virile student activities and enthusiasm.

The Long Hair Club

Of all the active clubs here at Portland Junior College this year, the Long Hair Club can undoubtedly claim the distinction of being not only the club with the largest membership, but also of being one of the most active proponents of school spirit. Organized three years ago under the guidance of Mr. Robert Goff and Mr. E. B. Fred Clark, Jr., the club has experienced a remarkable growth. Offering as a goal the appreciation and understanding of serious music, the members of this group have met two or three times each month. These meetings have produced some of the most inspiring social experiences of the college year.

At some of the more noteworthy get-togethers of this club, prominent personages of Portland's music circles have been the guest speakers. Many trenchant debates concerning the attributes of the modern school of music have also highlighted these evening discussions. These affable assemblies have proven that many individuals with differing tastes and ideas may still congregate on common ground and recognize these differences, all in the best tradition of Portland Junior College.

Because of the world's unstable condition at the present time, the membership of many of P. J. C.'s clubs has fluctuated considerably; the direction has been downward in many instances. But the Long Hair Club has appeared as a leader in this critical situation; its membership has risen from about four members at the beginning of the school year to almost thirty at the present time.

Where some of the clubs on the campus have offered only social relaxation, the Long Hair Club has attempted to offer something of concrete benefit to its members. And this "something" has been music. Such experiences as the members have had served, too, as a motivation toward a better understanding of the individual and the world of which he is a member. If no other accomplishment is claimed, the Long Hair Club may well proclaim that it has performed an indispensable service to Portland Junior College and its student body. This service was performed every time the group met to listen to the world's history written in music.

*"The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treason, stratagems, and spoils . . .
Let no such man be trusted."*

“Les Confreres Gaulois”

The world today is a marsh of misunderstanding and a turbulent sea of strife. We have learned to harness the atom, construct great cities, and build powerful industries, but as the distance between nations grows smaller, because of our tremendous growth in the transportation and communication fields, the world, in comparison, remains in a state of lethargy when it is forced to solve its social and international problems.

One of the prime reasons for our present-day conflicts stems from a lack of mutual comprehension. In the quickened and stepped-up tempo of the times, which we call progress, men are too preoccupied with petty squabbling among themselves, instead of taking time out to learn of his neighbor and to gain insight into his problems, politics, and culture. One of the greatest contributions to the fostering of international amity could result if we were to labor toward such a goal.

This year the P. J. C. French Club set an example which many would do well to follow. In order to bring about more good will and harmonious relations between the French people and ourselves, the club members corresponded with students enrolled at a lycée in Cherbourg. Many fine letters are being received by our members. Several interesting French movies have been presented, not only to the French Club but to the student body as well. At our meetings, French records were played, Parisienne magazines perused and France and other countries of Europe discussed.

Many projects have been planned by the club. Among these are a visit to the state capitol, a soiree in the late spring in cooperation with W. J. C., and finally a weekend trip to a French Canadian town where club members will have the opportunity to become acquainted with French tradition and culture here in North America.

The Stag

An institution of higher learning is not quite complete without a yearbook to record the history of the students throughout the year.

Any organization which undertakes the job of publishing a book, newspaper, or whatever it may be, must have some resemblance to a well-oiled machine. We of the "Stag", a raw bunch of amateurs, are not necessarily all this. However, being Americans, and having initiative, intuition, and perseverance, we have finally completed the yearbook which you are now reading.

This year, despite rising costs and a smaller enrollment, we have cut the cost of the book fifty percent from the preceding year. Because of this notable achievement in these days of roaring inflation, we are proud of our unprecedented credit balance. We hope that our efforts to make this a good book, as well as a financial success, will please not only our classmates but readers of many later generations.

P. J. C. PLAYING NORTHEASTERN BUSINESS COLLEGE

P. J. C. WON 74-69

Basketball 1950-1951

With Stan Plummer the only veteran of last year's team returning to the lineup until Ed Feeney's return late in the season, the Stags got off to a bad start, losing a very close one to Ricker College of Houlton and dropping the next one to the Bowdoin Frosh. P. J. C. then went into the win column with a 49-39 victory over Bridgton Academy.

City rival Portland University Law School and the Bates Frosh won two hard-fought victories over the Stags. The Portland University game was played at the Exposition Building as a preliminary to the Boston Celtics-College All-Star game. The Stags then travelled to Ricker College where they again lost by a narrow margin, this time 43-42. They went on to vent their wrath on Fryeburg Academy, 68-45.

The following week found the Stags with four big games on the schedule. They came out of it with losses to Nichols Junior, New England College, and Merrimack College, and a big win over the law students from Portland University. The losses were by 81-80, 75-69, and 80-78 scores. The Portland University game was a 92-54 runaway for P. J. C. which saw Johnny Marr score 33 points. In the next game Marr was still going strong as he connected for 30 points against the University of Connecticut Freshmen, although the Stags dropped a 73-62 decision. The following night the Springfield Jayvees administered a 60-26 defeat.

The game with Northeastern Business College saw the Stags' city rivals take an early lead and hold it to come through with the victory. After losing to the Colby Frosh, the Stags travelled to Fryeburg to down Fryeburg Academy 85-65, Marr again leading the parade—this time with 42 points. Next came two hard-fought games, one a 42-41 victory over Bridgton Academy and the other a six-point loss to the Connecticut Frosh. Then followed losses to Nichols Junior, Merrimack College, and Dean Academy, and an important win over the local rivals, Northeastern Business College.

Baseball - 1950

With an almost completely new team from the one which took the field in 1949, Ray Bicknell's Stags gathered in four wins while going down to five defeats. The only hold-overs from the previous year were Bobby Orr, third baseman; Chuck Churchill, right fielder; and Phil McCarthy, pitcher.

Although the 1950 edition of the Stags was one of the best hitting teams ever assembled at P. J. C., a definite lack of pitching strength kept them from burning up the diamonds. The Stags started the season strong in early May, registering wins over Northeastern Business College and St. Francis of Biddeford. They then ran into a string of trouble, dropping three in a row to Nichols Junior College, the Colby Freshmen, and the Bates Freshmen. After a long trip to Dudley, Mass., the Stags went down to a twelve to nine defeat, when a late inning rally fell short. Speirs led the P. J. C. attack with a double and triple while driving in four runs. Next came the Colby Frosh and a nine to two defeat. The Stags then travelled to Lewiston where they dropped a close one to the Bates Frosh despite the offensive power displayed by Speirs, Orr, and Norton. A home run hit by Mal Speirs was the longest ever hit at the Bates College field.

Phil McCarthy pitched a five-hit ten to five victory over St. Francis College to once more put P. J. C. in the victory column. Mal Speirs again aided the cause with a four-base blow, his second of the season against St. Francis. The fruits of victory were not to be enjoyed for long, however. The city rival, Northeastern, administered a thirteen-twelve defeat to the Stags by rallying for five runs in the last of the ninth to just offset the Stags' three, scored in the first half of the inning. Bob Merrill with a home run and a triple and Ed Norton with a home run led the P. J. C. attack.

Then came the game of the season! P. J. C.'s arch rival, Nichols Junior College came to Portland to play the Stags at the Deering Oaks diamond. After trailing from the first, the Green and White finally came to life in the eighth, scoring five times to take an eight to five lead. Nichols, however, rallied for six in the first of the ninth and once again the writing seemed to be on the wall. But the Stags were not to be denied! Dick Guy, pinch-hitting for pitcher Earl Jackson, singled to center. Walt Jordon and Bobby Merrill followed with base hits to load the bases. Johnny Meader, P. J. C. captain, connected for a long grand-slam home run to end the game and give the Stags a hard-fought twelve to eleven win and a split with Nichols Junior College for the season.

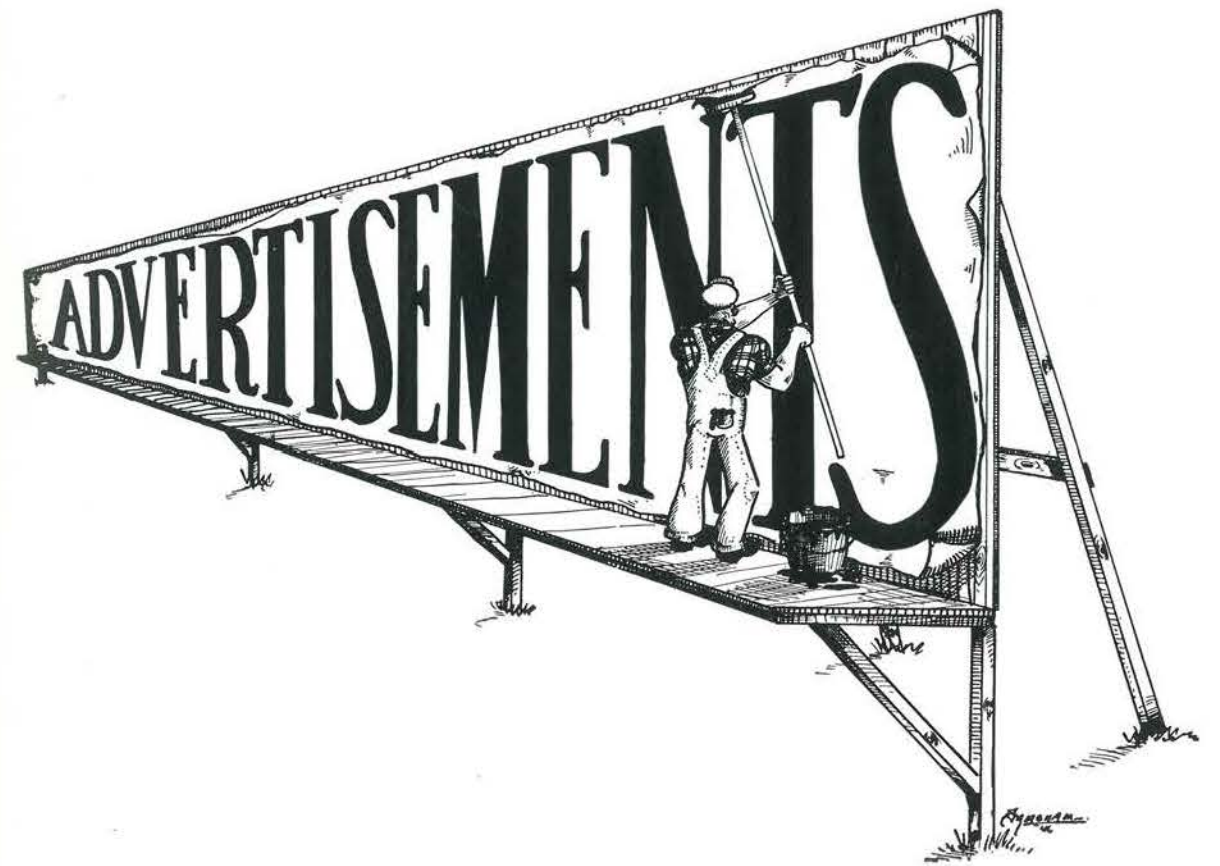

The last game of the season brought defeat to the Stags and a nine to one victory to the University of Connecticut Freshmen, despite the efforts of Meader, who again led the attack with two hits.
