Mrs. Elizabeth Eastman

Dedication

Rally speakers, after-dinner speakers, commencement speakers of today consistently expound the need for a rededication by Americans to the principles of Early America, and the pioneering people of our then growing country. We, then, the editors of this year's Stag, wish to dedicate our yearbook, not to the principles themselves, however, but to a modern, living embodiment of those principles.

The "new" words of modern orators must bring a smile of satisfaction to the lips of Mrs. Elizabeth Eastman, secretary to our Dean, for Mrs. Eastman has been living the words and concepts of these speech-makers to the letter, all her life.

Adequately occupied with her secretarial duties, Mrs. Eastman has never once passed off extra work that might make the sledding a little easier for others. She has catered to the whims and fancies of all with her warm smile of understanding. Regardless of any wiser, personal judgment derived from her vast store of wisdom, she did these "extras" with a thoroughness and dependability that is refreshing in these days rife with irresponsibility.

As long as there are still people like Mrs. Eastman treading the beaten paths of this tired old earth . . . breathing a sweeter breath into its soured and tired life . . . the editors of this yearbook happily forego the usual dedication to some fancy ideal in appreciation of the moral lesson learned and the preview into the naturally evolving America of Tomorrow.

Message from the Dean

"As we have climbed together, we have grown in qualities of mind and in the graces of the human spirit. Over and beyond increase of knowledge in the subject matter of courses we have grown in the knowledge of ourselves and of each other, in self-confidence or humility as the need might be, in the sense of personal responsibility, in the spirit of cooperation and service for the common good.

"Some have known moments of new insight and felt the kindling spark of new purpose. All have experienced the steady impact of the many unremembered things that have influenced thought, feeling, and action.

"As each has grown, so has grown the spirit of the group—toward that common understanding, that cooperative purpose, that rare fellowship which always has been and I hope always will be the special genius of Portland Junior College."

The Class of 1949

Nineteen hundred forty-eight marked the beginning of a new school year for thousands of students the world over. But at Portland Junior College the Senior Class marked the year for the College History. Only a few days before the national presidential election, P.J.C. held one of its own. No national political contest was ever more rabidly contested.

Without cause the Senior Class split into two factions; older veterans and younger veterans (for purposes of designation) and the fight was carried on with all the political judo at hand . . . no holds barred.

The younger faction with more energy to expend formed itself into the "Committee For Better Student Representation" and immediately launched literary missiles bordering on the defamatory and libelous. Down to the wire the "Committee" fought: holding secret meetings to map new and better strategies, forming more feasible slates; and for the unsure, forming pacts with the other side. Diplomacy, duplicity; machine politics, theoretical politics; coalitions within factions, coalitions between factions; secret pacts, agreements, treaties, deals; mimeograph machines, oratory, the U. S. mails all saw service in this year's election of Senior Class officers at Portland Junior College.

Paralleling the work of the Student Council, the Senior Class of Portland Junior College piled up its own share of permanent "firsts." First of all came the belief that Portland Junior College will some day receive its proper recognition. Then to back up that confidence came two other "firsts."

The first "first" was the appointment of a badly needed committee to probe into the details of the class rings for which all students raised such a clamor. Chaired by Philip Kates, the committee composed of Mark Andrews, Ronald Smith, Richard Noyes, and Henry Latini not only selected a design and rings of a quality corresponding to the uniqueness of the College and Student Body, but arranged for pins as well.

The next first in the annals of the College history was the procurement of a class gift by a committee of such seniors as Jerry Howard, Committee Chairman, and his able assistants, Ray Leeman, Scott Hoar, Ralph Roberts, Jed Bridges, and Larry Campbell. The gift chosen by the class . . . a stuffed Stag's head for the Auditorium . . . is a credit to the members of the Class of '49.

The men pictured above are the few who have survived three years of Portland Junior College teaching. Enrolling September, 1946, at Mountainview, a former housing project, these men began the second phase of their education in courses ranging from the accelerated refresher courses to the straight college Business Administration and Liberal Arts programs.

All former participants in the "Real War" — these valiant personalities, realizing the importance of formal education, immediately, upon their discharge, laid aside their implements of war and took up the tools of learning: books, pens, slide-rules.

The Class of Nineteen Fifty

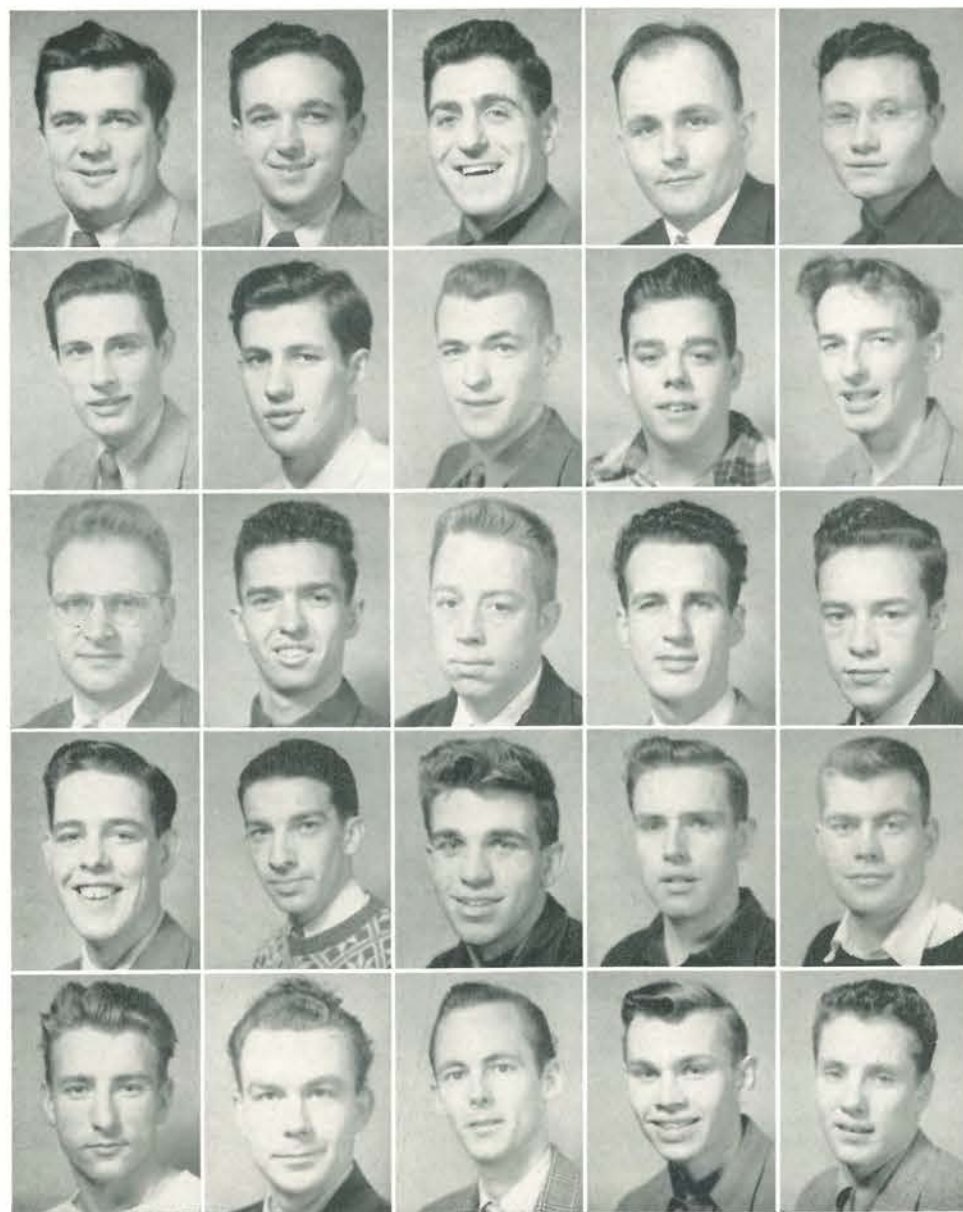

The Freshman Class this year showed an even greater transition back to the normal. Unlike recent freshman classes at P.J.C., befuddlement, confusion, bewilderment were the main characteristics. Nowhere could the swagger, and the confidence of the previous classes be found.

But as the year progressed, the freshmen grew in stature. Freshman voices became stentorian at Council meetings. Freshman representation on the various activity committees increased. Sports saw freshmen coming to the fore time after time until the line of separation between senior and freshman participation grew to an indiscernible thinness.

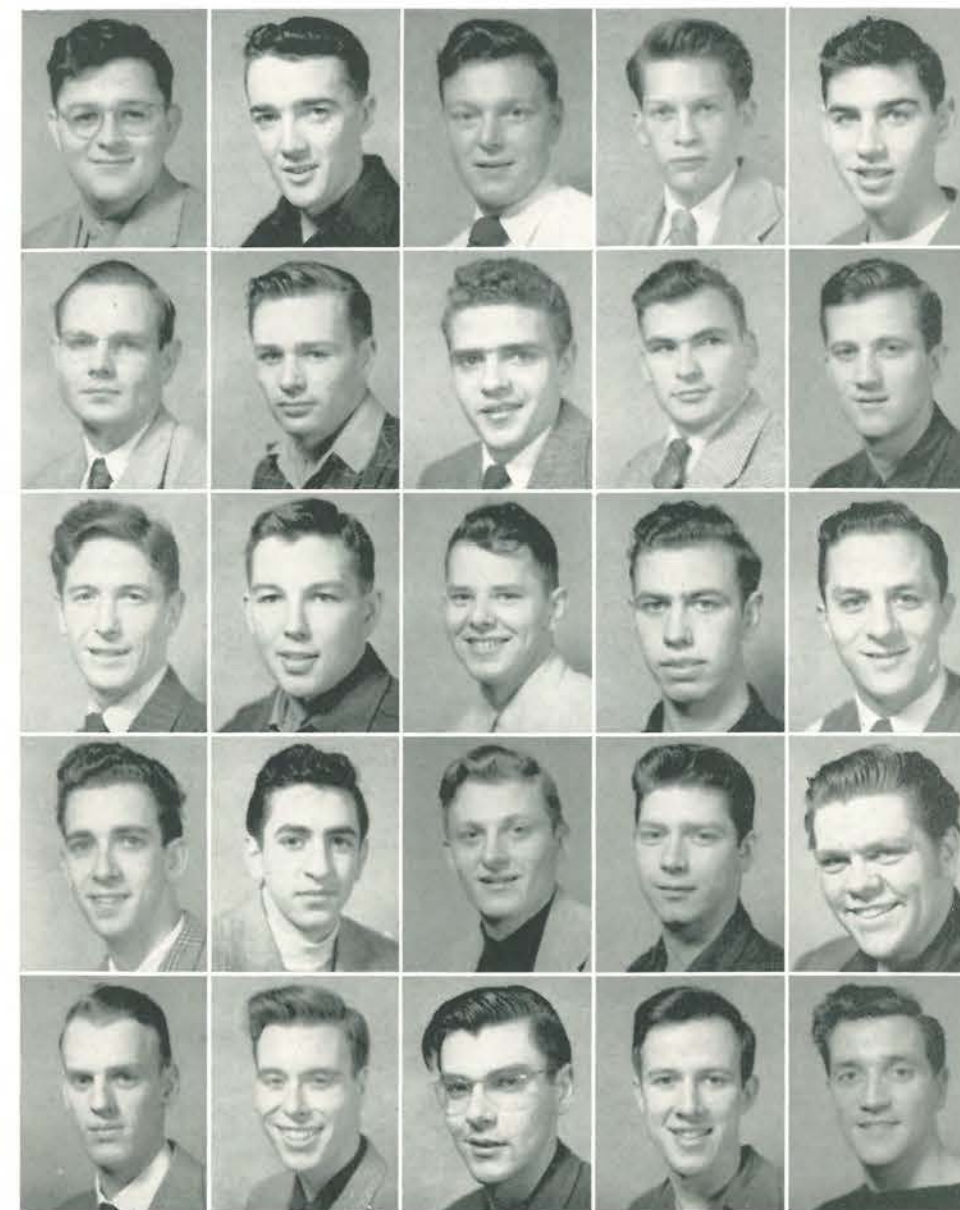

Freshman Class leaders, its officers, Robert Anderson, Al Swett, Marty O'Connor, William Cousins, and William Edes held their own with the other "wheels" at the college. Freshman Anderson, President of the class, was elected Vice President of the Student Council. When he found it necessary to resign because of his ministerial duties, Freshman Al Swett was then elected by the Council to serve as its Vice President. Freshman Bill Edes was elected Recording Secretary and served capably as a help-mate to the omnipotent Cedric Williams, Council Secretary. Swett regularly chaired the various and sundry dance committees, and was unanimously elected by the precision-mad Committee for Graduation to head the ushers for the Commencement Exercises.

Admittedly unsteady and confused at the beginning this year's Frosh are satisfied with their powers of adjustment and resultant development. Seniors can leave their beloved Alma Mater with us, without fear. With the help of God, and Dean Bonney, the Frosh will take up the work where the Class of '49 left off: Conscientiously striving for collegiate growth; strong physically, straight morally, and hitherto unprecedented.

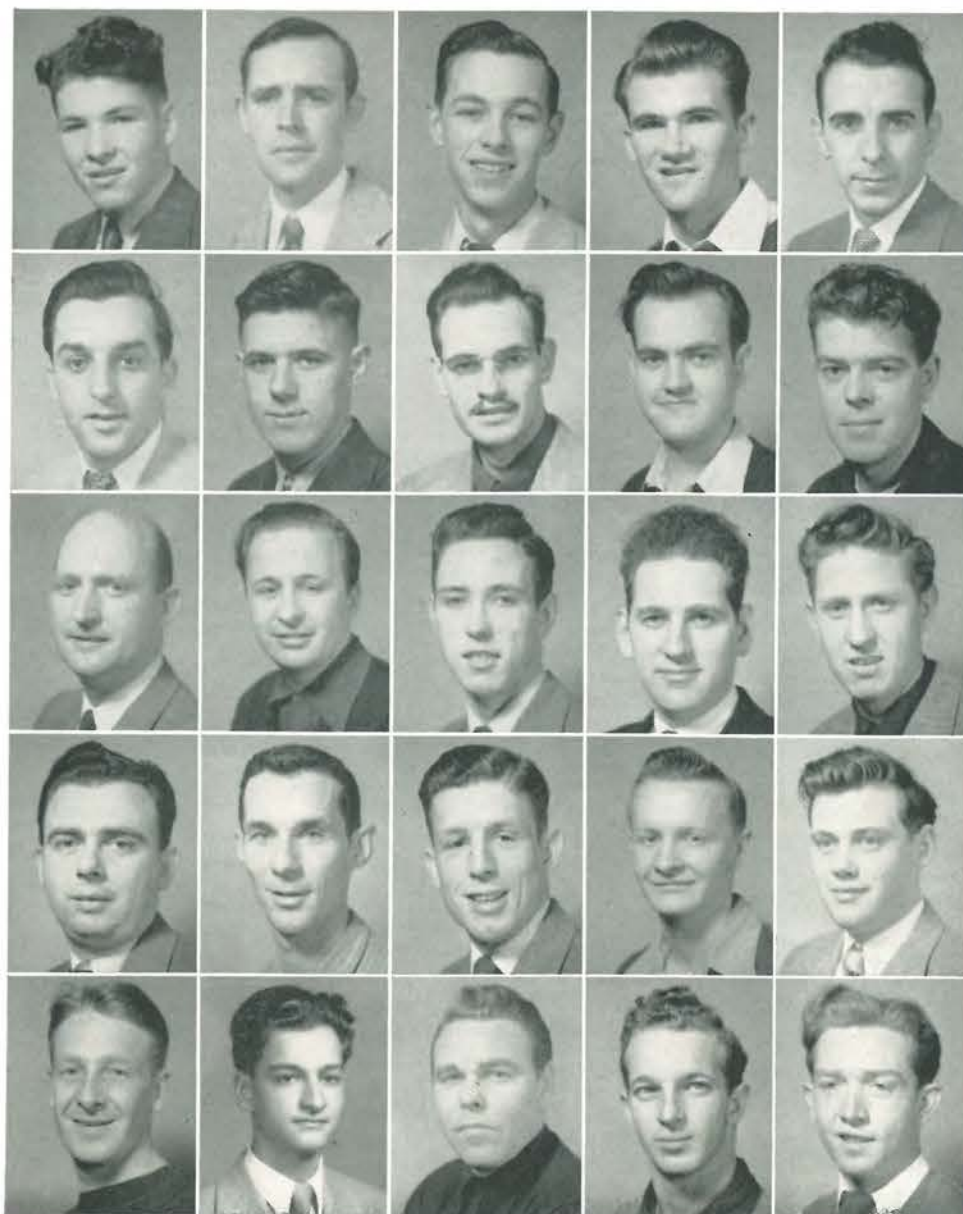

Signed,
WILLIAM COUSINS,
Secretary

PRE - COLLEGE

The Pre-College Group

This year, as in the past two years, the Pre-College class carried on their studies and activities in the shadow of the more formal Freshman and Senior classes above them. But this year, as not so much in the past two years, the influence of this class was felt more strongly.

Our representatives to the Student Council headed important committees; the sportsmen from our class did much to increase the overall sports prowess of the Junior College.

Our classes, which meet for two hour periods, five days a week, limited participation to a large degree. The overall feeling was prevalent, however, that the pre-college group was beginning to come into its own as a part of the Junior College student body.

The Stag 1949

For the second year in the history of the Junior College, the students have organized a yearbook. The name "THE STAG" remains the same.

The editorial staff was appointed by the Student Council early in the second semester, and primary plans for the yearbook were soon under consideration. Richard Noyes and Scott Hoar were named Editors; Dick handling the business and technical end, while Scott worked as a general advisor, helper and chief photographer. Thus, the headaches were spread to two heads, rather than one, as was the case last year.

Able handling the Advertising Manager's job was Thomas Roche, who, assisted by a number of door-to-door enthusiasts, was soon rounding out the monetary budget. James Nicholas was placed as Circulation Manager with the hustling aid of Ralph Roberts and Al Di Poalo. Raymond Leeman tapped the Club Editor job with the aid of the club secretaries.

Others contributing time and effort to the undertaking were: Richard Palmer, sports editor; Henry Latini, feature editor; and Robert Anderson, campaign manager.

If the "STAG" does its job of providing memories, and cementing friendships over the years, the Staff will feel well rewarded for their efforts.

The Student Council

Elected early in October, the fourteen men composing the Student Council here at Portland Junior College quickly shed their coats, rolled up their sleeves and began a program for getting things done. Six committees were rapidly appointed by the president of the council to parallel similar committees held by the faculty, and to better coordinate campus activities. In rapid succession followed: a call for club constitutions; a granting of charters to the various social organizations; granting of appropriations ranging in lumps up to 1,000 dollars; securing those necessities that facilitate classroom life; and outfitting and transporting our basketball team, to mention but a few.

But students want other things to make their hours at college more agreeable, and our students are no exceptions. They wanted dances. The council not only organized the activities of the campus social organizations to accede to the students' wishes, but contributed a pair of their own dances. The students wanted a telephone . . . for their exclusive use . . . and a telephone was quickly installed in the cafeteria to be maintained by the council. The students wanted class rings and class pins. The council selected an excellent design, one that received almost unanimous approval of the seniors. But in the first semester, the crowning project of the council was the work of eliminating the confusion that prevails at class time when there is no reliable system of announcing the hour. The council corrected this failing with a fund drive, and the final procurement of an automatic bell system devoid of human inaccuracies.

With the second semester came a slack in council business. One half of its members, seniors, were obliged to help plan and prepare Commencement Exercises, senior outing, commencement ball, and all the other graduation activities. However, the council still found time to jointly sponsor a dance with Westbrook Junior College, the first they hope, of a lasting tradition.

Portland Junior College News

Truly an organ of the student body designed to unequivocally inform, the Portland Junior College News has completed another successful year of operation.

Early in the first semester, after stiff competition, Scott Hoar was appointed to the editorship by the Student Council, along with the rest of the editorial staff. The staff then immediately surrounded themselves with talented reporters, feature writers, and photographers.

Other officers of the "News" included Ralph Roberts, Associate Editor; Ronald Kellam and George Linscott, Assistant Editors; Richard Noyes, Business Manager; Gordon Adams, Advertising Manager; Ronald Smith, Circulation Manager; Irving Marcus, Exchange Editor; and Ronald Lander, Sports Editor.

The News has a triple purpose for operating. It is printed to inform the student, and the alumni, and also to act as a permanent chronological record. In the latter capacity, it is kept in bound volumes on the shelves of the College Library.

Mr. Richard Woodbury acts as faculty adviser to the News Staff, and has the job of ironing out problems beyond the control of the student members.

The paper is financed partly by advertising and partly through the student activity fee, and if further aid is necessary, it is furnished by the college. It has a surprisingly large circulation of 1,500 copies, and is distributed free every two or three weeks, depending on the circumstances of school attendance.

With a news office, regular assignments, and special reporting jobs, the "News" is run as closely comparable to a regular newspaper as is possible.

There is an annual banquet which is attended by all members of the staff.

As is the practice of the News, aspirants for next year's top editorial posts have been serving as freshman editors during the second semester, and with the valuable experience and supervision they are getting, should be able to carry on with the paper admirably next year.

International Relations Club

The International Relations Club, with the aim of promoting contemporary thinking and understanding about local, national, and international affairs, began its second year of operation on the campus in October of this year. Elections were held with Allen Ryan elected President and James Hackett, Secretary-Treasurer. Harry J. Bridges and James Nanos were named council members.

The club is affiliated with the Carnegie Foundation for the Endowment of International Peace, which in turn is affiliated with the United Nations organization.

December of 1948 saw the club attending the New England Conference of International Relations Clubs located at the University of Vermont in Burlington. Among the delegates who took part in several of the debates were: James Nanos, David Huff, Allan Ryan, Sherman Baker, and Frank Rodway. The debates were concerned with "Communism and Capitalism," and "Strengthening International Relations With Russia." Then, in the latter part of December, a second conference was held under the auspices of the Bowdoin Political Science Forum. This was a meeting of the State of Maine International Relations Clubs, and the debate was on the "Future of Germany."

This year's club members feel that they have very adequately discharged their responsibility of representing the college and of keeping informed of important developments.

The Outing Club

The Outing Club was formed again this year under the supervision of Mr. Alfred Clarke of the faculty, and officers were elected at the first meeting. They were: Eli Kroot, President; Philip Michaud, Vice President; E. George McGlaufflin, Secretary; and Donald Hoyt, Treasurer.

The club initiated a new activity when it introduced the Annual Old Timer's Day and barn dance to the school, and the affair went off very successfully this year.

Although handicapped by a shortage of snow during the Winter months, the club carried on activities and did manage to go on one major skiing trip. The trip was made to the White Mountains, where the club enjoyed a full week-end of good skiing. Highlight of this excursion was the International Ski Jumping Meet at Berlin, New Hampshire. Winter Carnival plans were also formulated, but had to be abandoned because of the lack of snow.

Spring outings and week-end excursions were also made, with the emphasis on hiking and fishing.

The group has found a site for a permanent ski lodge, and a center for outdoor activities. Plans have been made for purchase of the land, and with this in mind the Outing Club anxiously awaits next year, and hopes to include the entire student body in more of its activities.

The Radio Club

Organized during the third week of school, this year's Radio Club gave students interested in radio work ample opportunity to learn many of the fundamentals of radio broadcasting.

Three programs were presented each week: "The Great Books Forum," held Sunday evenings over WPOR; "Portland Junior College On The Air," presented Tuesday evenings over WPOR; and "News and Views of P.J.C.," aired over WMTW on Wednesday evenings.

Mr. John Jaques acted as Faculty Adviser, and club officers were elected as follows: Samuel Kraeer, President; Robert Silverman, Vice President; Robert Gifford, Secretary; and James Mollasky, Treasurer.

"Mike Night," something new at the Junior College, was introduced this year by the Radio Club. It was held Mar. 15, 1949 in the college auditorium, and consisted of a dance, a radio program (broadcast from the school over WPOR), and some slapstick vaudeville by Dick Goodie and Norman Mogul.

Two members of the club, Robert Gifford and Robert Silverman, producers of many P.J.C. shows, also branched out on their own as independent radio producers, which is evidence of the worth of the club to students and of the good job being done.

Seated is James Molaskey, radio commentator for "News and Views of P.J.C." which was heard weekly over Station WMTW.

The Dramatic Club

This year, for the first time since establishment on the present campus, a dramatic club was organized at the Junior College. Officers were elected with Richard Hasson becoming President, Arnold Kuvent, Vice President; Richard Noyes, Secretary; and Ronald Smith, Treasurer.

Then the club rolled up its sleeves and went to work. The first production of the year was a half hour radio play, "Speak 'O The Devil," produced by Walter Thombs. The cast included such proven performers as Ronald Lander, Ronald Smith, Dick Hasson and Dick Noyes. The club also scored another radio success, "Christmas Comes To An Island," an original play by Dick Goodie.

The club took another step forward when it became a member of the Delta Psi Omega, a National Dramatic Honor Society.

The first stage production, "George Washington Slept Here," was put on at Portland High School due to lack of facilities here on our campus. The female members of the cast, and they did an excellent job, were supplied by the Westbrook Junior College Dramatic Club.

Aside from their actual dramatic accomplishments, the members of the club have had a wonderful time working together this year, and they extend an open hand and a hearty "carry on" to the men who will make up next year's club.

Harvard Reading Film

One of the most important contributions to the Junior College this year, was the introduction of the Harvard Reading Film. At the instigation of Cedric Williams, and with the help of Arthur Sprague, thirty-five Seniors became interested in the reading film method of increasing reading comprehension and speed. Each senior contributed five dollars towards the cost of the film—this film was later presented to the College for continued use. Class meetings were held twice weekly in an unused classroom for periods of an hour and a half each.

In addition to the film, various reading tests were used to gauge the progress of each individual and the group as a whole.

The first experimental group of seniors to take the course made an average increase in their speed and comprehension of over 80%. No credit-points were given for the first group, because of its experimental nature, but the second semester and future groups will receive one credit for completion of the course.

Here's how it works. A page of reading material is projected on the screen. A moving beam of light reveals the writing, one line at a time, beginning at a speed of 150 words per minute, and increasing in speed a little each lesson until the student is reading at up to twice the initial speed. Following a first showing of the film, a set of written questions is presented to test the comprehension of what has been read. The film is then run through again and another chance is given to answer the questions. This procedure is repeated with a written selection, which is timed, with the questions testing comprehension after each reading.

The Long Hair Club

A new organization, appearing for the first time on the campus this year, was the Music Appreciation Group, better known as the Long Hair Club. The club was started early in the year by Mr. Goff and Mr. E. B. Clark, and is composed of students and instructors who appreciate serious opera-symphony type music.

Throughout the first semester it met weekly, taking up works of the members' choice, the records being furnished by the members themselves from personal collections.

At the start of the second semester, Donald Hoyt was appointed Manager of the Club. This was the first step toward formal organization, and since then, programs have been selected by Chris Packard and Donald Hoyt. The records have been furnished by Cressey & Allen since February, as a good will gesture, giving the Club an excellent choice of music. The group meets in Mr. Hester's typing room, and drives out all would-be typists for an hour. Most students think of this group as sober-sides, however, it is actually a very congenial group, welcoming all lovers of good music, and varying in attendance from five to twenty at each meeting.

Troubles occasionally beset the club, as when Mr. Jacques runs off with the vic for his Public Speaking class when the club needs it, or when needles suddenly disappear, or there is no power. The club has demonstrated its ability to surmount such obstacles as these, and regards this as testimony of its ability to continue and become a part of Portland Junior College in the future.

The Glee Club

Formed early in the year under the supervision of Mr. Robert Goff, the Glee Club began practicing enthusiastically soon after, and were not long in becoming a harmonious, well rounded group.

Officers were elected shortly thereafter with James Nicholas landing the President's job, Harold Deinstad, Jr., becoming Vice President, and Freddy Jackson occupying the Secretary-Treasurer's chair.

Although small in number, the group contained a fine mixture of voices. James Nicholas and Ralph Roberts did the tenor chores, Sherman Baker was the club's baritone, and Harold Deinstad and Brad Bonney sang bass. Freddy Jackson furnished the musical background with his piano, and also sang emergency tenor.

Specializing in such numbers as "When Day Is Done," "The Whiffen-poof Song," etc., the group entertained the student body at two assemblies, and met with notable success.

Let us hope that the Glee Club will continue to function next year, and will do as splendid a job as this year's group.

Les Confreres Gaulois

This has been the third successful year for "Les Confreres Gaulois," the Junior College French Club. Organized in 1946, the club has always prided itself in its materialistic accomplishments, and also in its increasingly better understanding of France and the French people.

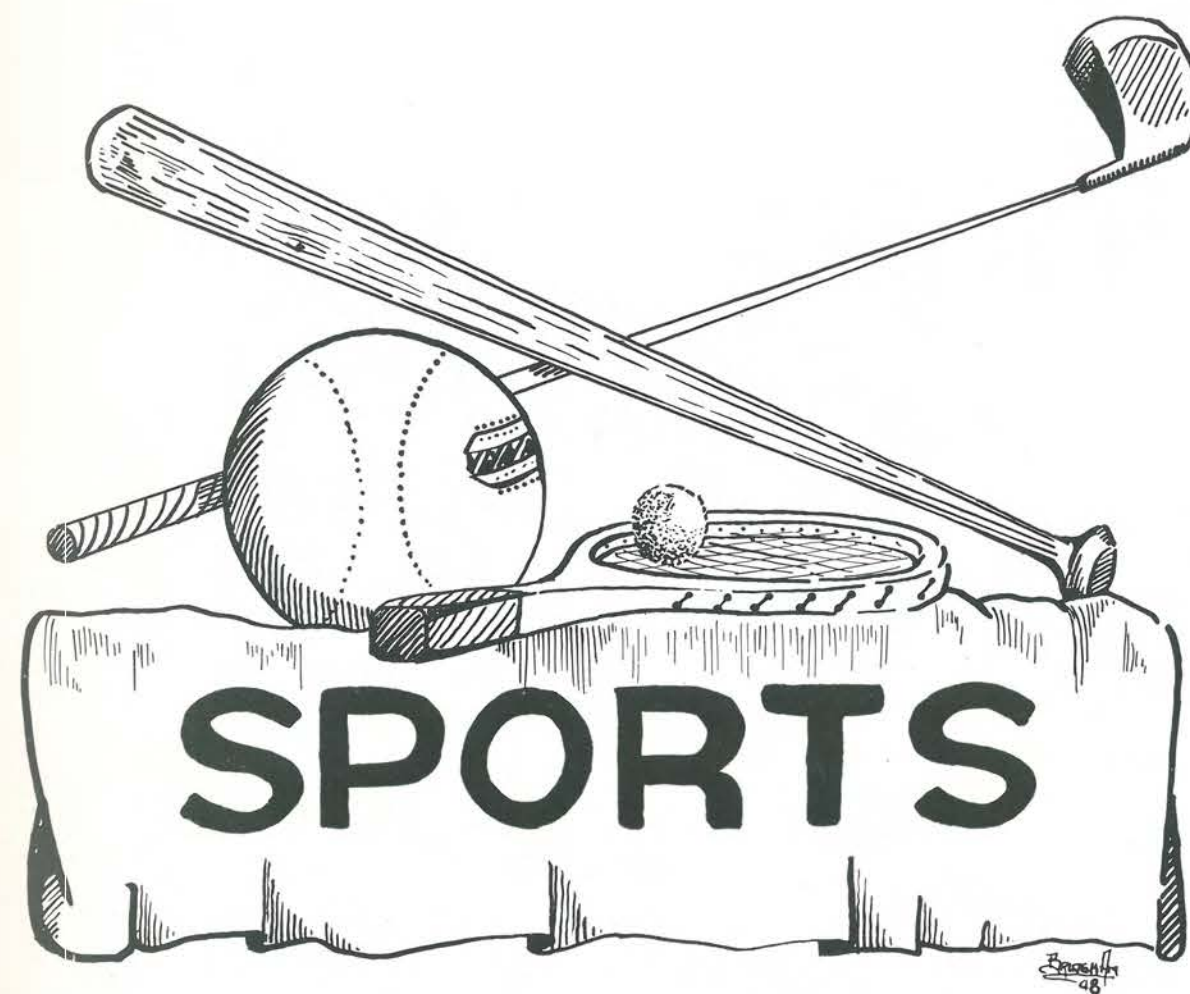

Officers elected for the year included Peter Barris, President; Giles Beaulac, Vice-President; Ronald Smith, Secretary; and Ronald Lander, Treasurer.

The club was hardly functioning before talk of correspondence with French students filled the air. As a result, about fifteen students are now writing to French students who are studying English at Cherbourg.

As the previous year's presentation was such a great success, the French Club again decided to sing French carols at Christmas time. There was an important addition to the group, however, when it was announced that Westbrook Junior College would sing in conjunction with the club. The program, directed by Mr. Robert Goff, was enjoyed by all participants.

Finally, as its gift to the people of France, the French Club turned over the profits from the annual Spring dance to CARE, which in turn will send ten dollar food packages to needy families in that country.

The French Club has come a long way toward the realization of its goal of understanding French culture this year, and leaves next year's club a fine record to measure up to.

Rifle Club

The first meeting of the Rifle Club was held on the Y.M.C.A.'s basement rifle range. In October of 1948, with a very large group in attendance. At this meeting fundamentals of riflery were taught the team by Mr. Lowell of the Maine Rifle Instructors Association. Club officers elected for the year were: Eli Kroot, President; Arthur McArthur, Secretary; Roger Mead, Treasurer; and Lawrence Campbell, Range Officer.

There was a serious lack of equipment and funds at the beginning, but the group stuck by their guns and many became quite proficient as the semester progressed.

At the start of the second semester the practice night was changed from Monday to Wednesday, and more men began to attend the meetings. The club was granted a small allotment from the student activity fund, and immediately joined the National Rifle Association, adopting their constitution.

The first competition was held in March of 1949 against the Sanford Y.M.C.A. team. The club lost by 14 points, but made a fine showing and other matches were quickly scheduled.

Only two members of this year's team will be lost at graduation. The majority being freshmen. As a result the team will be well supplied with experienced men next year, and looks forward to a successful season.

Basketball

In the words of Coach Ray Bicknell as the season began, "Well, we don't have to worry about an undefeated season this year." That was the beginning of the '48-'49 basketball season for the Junior College "Stags."

The reason for this statement was that the Stags lost their first game of the season to the Bates Bobcats by a 1 point margin, 59 to 60.

But this was only the first game of the season, and then the P.J.C. Stags came into their own, winning 6 in a row. And when the season had ended they had garnered 12 imposing victories to only 7 losses.

The season was marked by long passing and amazingly fast breaks that at times left the opposition in a quandry. This style of basketball was paced by the quick movements and sure shooting of Billy Edes who won the top honors in the scoring race with 153 points. But three other starters for the Stags ran close behind; they were Bill Folsom, 151; Pete Harnois, 149; and Bobby Slipp, 146.

But let us not overlook the smooth, sure playing of Captain John Meader. Meader played for the Stags last year, and this year, let it be said, he played his usual inspired, all-over-the-court ball — rebounds, passes, needed hoops.

As we look back to the standout game, the Northeastern Business College — with its usual staunch rivalry — was definitely it. This was the game that the Stags came out on top in the last few seconds with a 48 to 47 victory. It was sheer bliss to a hard-fought, hard-won game.

While starting the season with a loss, the Portland Junior "Stags" went on a six game win streak, but were stopped in their second game with the Northeastern Business College five, 52 to 47; then losing to Springfield College J.V.'s, 52 to 50. A win marked the next game with Nichols Junior College, 64 to 62. But then, they lost the next four out of five beating the Bowdoin J.V.'s, 53 to 52 and finished the season in a grand display of four straight wins.

Larry Golder goes up for the ball with an unidentified Laconia player. Looking on are Pete Harnois and Jim Henry.

Baseball

Starting the season with but five hold-overs from last year — William Edes, catcher; Charles Amman, first base; Louis Waugh, converted last year from outfield to the mound; Andrew Lano, third base and pitcher; and Pierre Harnois, outfielder and pitcher — the Portland Junior College baseball team went on to win five out of its eight game schedule.

The Bicknellmen started out the season with a thrilling game against Nichols Junior College winning 9 to 8. Then the toughest game of the season, the first Maine Annex game, which went eleven innings only to be lost 11 to 10. Next the Connecticut Frosh took the long trek to Maine only to be sent back with an 18 to 2 loss. Then the club travelled to New England College of New Hampshire to garner their third win 7 to 6. William Edes will remember the next game, which was again with New England College. Edes, the two year backstop, was injured in the second inning and was out for the season, but the Stags went on to win with Edward Schultz backstopping, 12 to 10.

The Maine Annex and Nichols next came to the P.J.C. green to set the Stags back in two losses, 21 to 2 and 7 to 4, respectively.

Then the club grabbed the final game with Northeastern Business College, 15 to 7.

Beside the five two year men, there were Robert Ward, swap-off between second and third; Robert Orr, shortstop; Bernard Larson, left-field; Charles Crowell, center-field; Charles Churchill, pitcher-centerfield.

And Edward Schultz, catcher; William Amergian, pitcher-second baseman; Donald Cockburn, shortstop; Philip McCarthy, pitcher; and Ralph Roberts, right-fielder.

Tennis

Under the firm direction of Coach Ray Bicknell the P.J.C. Tennis team racqueted their way through four matches to date, but have garnered but one victory against three losses.

The team started the season with a good embryo of stars from last year's squad. Henry "Hank" Gilbert, Murray Reuben and Charlie Laponis. These men have shown throughout; such as the stellar performances of Reuben and Gilbert who are at present undefeated in doubles competition. While Hank Gilbert alone stood out at the Annex with the single point, taking the singles honor for that day.

As for the new men added this year Bill Folsom must be said to be the stand-out. For Folsom this was his first time at swinging a racquet, and his fill-in work was admirable. Also there was Bill Blake's consistent placements that gave the team creditable points. Last but not least were the two hard-working freshmen to the game, Jim Dawson and Phil Sedgley, both of whom played good tennis.

The team to date has lost to Maine Annex twice, and Deering once. Games with Portland and Lewiston have yet to be played.

Golf

Starting the season with but one hold-over from last year — Frank Nanos — the P.J.C. Golf team has made an imposing performance throughout. The first game was a clear sweep at Brunswick against the Maine Annex, 9 to 0. The second was the only tie of the year with Northeastern Business College at Riverside. Then the club continued on to beat the Annex again, 7 to 2. And their last game to date was a smooth 5 to 4 win over Northeastern Business College. This leaves but one game to play which will be the rubber game with N. B. C.

Frank Nanos has been — beyond the cry of doubt — the outstanding ball-driver of the congregation. His 85 for 18 holes at Riverside — his first time out for the season — was a remarkable feat. And Nanos, the key man of the club, has beaten every man he has opposed.

As for the men behind Nanos there were — Festus Joyce, long on the irons and consistent in his play — Paul Stebbins, who pulled a creditable job in paring the back nine at Riverside — Ernest Buckley, not such a long ball hitter but consistent and determined to the end — Richard Goody, who came from behind twice to garner the needed points for victory — Bennett Porteous, who is known for his excellent wood shots from the fairway — and Nelson Harmon, who was the utility man, and did a good job for the club.

Cheerleaders

Prior to the arrival on the floor, last Fall, of our Green and White clad Basketeers, a knicker and cap clad group calling themselves "cheerleaders" were wont to roam and chant their ways across the line of vision of the spectators.

This group was the first formal attempt to organize a cheering section to support the excellent teams that the Junior College consistently puts on the floor.

Clad in old fashion caps, coats and checkered knickers, and never successfully completing any of their involved yells, they were able to raise the audience to a record pitch of enthusiasm. They were active throughout the late Fall and Winter.

APPRECIATIONS

The task of publishing this year's "STAG" has at times seemed an insurmountable one. The staff was beset with obstacles from the very beginning, and had it not been for the kind interest shown by persons both inside as well as outside the Campus, the task would well have been even more difficult.

So, at this time, the associate editors would like to write their thanks to those people who worked so hard to lighten our work:

To Dean Luther Bonney for his moral support and the faith which he voiced in us; to Mr. Lawrence for his great financial assistance; to Mr. Woodbury for his valuable technical advice; to Mr. Harmon of Forest City Printing Company for his everlasting patience, the use of his time, and the many enjoyable hours spent in his den; to Mr. Sullivan for his photographic advice and pictures; to Mr. Northgraves for his art advice; to Mr. Marshall of Portland Engraving for his aid and advice; to Robert White for an excellent art job on our cover; and to Henry Latini, Ray Leeman, Thomas Roche, Charles Jortberg, James Dawson, Jerry Connolly, Ken MacFarland, James Nicholas, Ralph Roberts, Al Di Poalo, Jed Bridges, and George McGlauffin for their fine spirit and cooperation; and to Cedric Williams for his firm grasp on our purse-strings, his loud and insistent objections.

And to all the others who lifted a finger in our behalf, or said a kind word for us, many, many thanks.

As this, the "STAG" goes the last mile to bed, we the editors, feel a great responsibility lift from our shoulders. This feeling is second only to the hope that we have pleased you, our reader, and with this we leave you for a greater, more extensive Portland Junior College of the future.

Signed,
RICHARD NOYES,
SCOTT HOAR,
Associate Editors

THERE IS A "DOWN EAST" way of doing things that is more than three centuries old and there is nothing secret about it:

Painstaking, careful, non-rushing methods.

Combine these elements with the finest of original raw materials and you have the secret of the quality and "home spun" flavor of Maine foods.

Nowhere is this principle more faithfully followed than in the Maine food industry. And nowhere in that industry is it exemplified more than in the plants of Burnham & Morrill Company.

In a broad sense Burnham & Morrill Company takes the fresh product of Maine's fertile fields and sparkling ocean waters and, with painstaking care and the "know how" of nearly 90 years of experience, it transforms these basic foodstuffs into good-eating delights for millions of humans.

Besides its Baked Beans and Brown Bread Burnham & Morrill Company has long been known for the excellence of quality and flavor of its ocean-fresh sea foods and Maine grown vegetables. Other specialty products include old fashioned Beef Stew, Mince Meat, Spaghetti, Welsh Rarebit and Maine Corn Relish.

The latest and best in quality control methods—plus the "Down East" knack of knowing how—and an efficiently functioning research division to maintain its high quality standards, insure Burnham & Morrill Company of a constant striving toward the goal of its founders—nothing short of perfection in food production.
