CLASS ODE—1951

*Stay, molding hands!
Move cautiously.
This common clay is life.
These hands that godlike claim the lamp
May hold the knife.
This groping mind,
This bit of life,
This sleeping sod may wake
To crush within a moment's time
The knife's mistake.
Ah, worldly hands,
Impervious hands,
"Ye know not what ye do."
From malformed clay in discord
Dissension grew.
Stay, molding hands!
Inspire peace.
This clay knows noble birth.
A bloody gun on a blood-stained field
Is not its worth.
Cry, bleeding earth.
Cry, homeless child.
Let your ears wash well these hands
Which thoughtlessly in iron welded
Tortured lands.
Time, unconquered,
Whispering,
Lends Wisdom mighty weight.
These hands that mold the child today
Can measure fate.*
