INTRODUCTION

Like most American cities, Bangor has undergone major changes during the twentieth century. A great fire in 1911 destroyed both commercial and residential areas, while the urban renewal of 1968 substantially altered the business district. The impression resulting from these events, combined with many losses of individual buildings, is that the city lacks the historic resources enjoyed by other communities.

In actuality, the tremendous growth which Bangor experienced in the nineteenth century has left the city with six residential areas which contain a high concentration of historic and/or architecturally significant structures. These, together with twenty-eight buildings located outside the areas, comprise the following Bangor Historic Resources Inventory.

This inventory has been prepared to assist the city in developing a planned approach to the conservation of these resources. The data contained in these pages can provide a tool with which to formulate judgements concerning the designation of local historic districts and sites. Specific recommendations for such districts and sites lie beyond the scope of this report and are more properly the responsibility of the city and its interested citizens.

The Bangor Historic Resources Inventory ranks as the first publication of an in-depth architectural survey of a Maine city. A variety of sources were consulted to determine the original owner and construction date of the more than nine hundred inventoried structures. The Bangor Historical Society's 1973-74 architectural survey was used as a base from which to begin. The 1853 city map, the 1859 county map, the 1875 county atlas, the 1875 Bangor bird's eye view, and the current Sanborn city maps proved invaluable for locating individual properties and their early inhabitants. This data was correlated with nineteenth century Bangor city directories. Further clarification of the information was achieved through consulting land transactions in the Penobscot County Registry of Deeds and old newspapers in the Bangor Public Library. Application of this final research step to many of the inventoried structures became unfeasible because of its time-consuming nature. Any refinement of the survey would necessitate additional deed and newspaper work.

The Bangor Historic Resources Inventory was prepared during August and September of 1975. In conjunction with this effort, the newly formed Historic Preservation Committee of the Bangor Historical Society made a photographic record of the approximately nine hundred inventoried structures. The author wishes to acknowledge the help of this committee as well as that of Richard D. Kelly for his revision of the Broadway National Register Historic District map. A special debt of gratitude goes to James H. Mundy and James B. Vickery, whose researches in Bangor's past have produced much of the original source material for the city's now emerging architectural history.

KEY TO BANGOR HISTORIC RESOURCES INVENTORY:

- R            Indicates that the property is on the National Register.
- E            Indicates that the property is eligible for nomination to the National Register.
- I            Indicates that the property differs substantially in age and/ or character from the majority of structures within its area.
